Japan Breaks China's Drive, Levels New Tientsin Area

Siege Lifted, 'Lost' Garrison Is Saved

By the Associated Press.

Tientsin, July 30.—The Japanese army today subjected Tientsin to a second day of heavy shelling and air bombardment as it clamped its domination more grimly on the whole region between the sea and the Yungting River west of Peiping.

Thousands of homeless Chinese streamed out of the native sections of Tientsin tonight, seeking escape from the terror of the last two days.

Again Japanese shells and air bombs fired buildings in the Chinese sections of the city. Chinese said corpses still lay in the streets, but there was no estimate of casualties. Yesterday, in the first day of bombardment, Chinese officers said thousands of non-combatant Chinese were killed or wounded.

Chinese Lines Smashed.

From many points along the twisting 100-mile front between the coast and Peiping's western environs came Japanese claims of success for their arms. Other accounts tended to show that Chinese resistance had been smashed over a wide area.

The Japanese declared today's Tientsin bombardment was necessary to wipe out centers of Chinese military preparation and to turn back a Chinese counter-attack. There had been rifle firing along the fringes of the Japanese concession, when suddenly Japanese air bombers and heavy artillery swung into action.

Among the targets was the science library of Nankai University, gift of the Rockefeller Foundation to that institution, most important center of learning in the north. At the same time the preparatory schools of Nankai in the native city were bombed.

Important Station Falls.

Domei, the Japanese news agency, reported a Japanese column under Maj. Gen. M. Kawabe captured Changsintien, important station on the Peiping-Hankow Railway, 15 miles southwest of Peiping and on the west bank of the Yungting River.

Hitherto Japanese activity has been confined to the east of the Yungting. Other sources declared the Japanese had brought aircraft and artillery into play against Chinese entrenched in the hills west of Peiping. Japanese airplanes were operating from a field near the former summer palace of the emperors of China, northwest of the city.

At the other end of the front the Japanese captured a strong Chinese position at Taku, at the mouth of the Hai River. This, they said, permitted resumption of shipping operations at Tangku, deep-water port for Tientsin.

Organized Chinese resistance at Tientsin seemed to be at an end. The boldly conceived Chinese attack on the Japanese concession and military positions early Thursday appeared to have collapsed under the vicious two days' bombardment. Two brigades of Chinese regulars were reported in rapid retreat, while the militarized police who joined in the attacks yesterday were giving up their arms.

Regulars Reported on Move.

At headquarters of Japan's North China expedition here redoubled precautions against Chinese attacks were ordered. They were due in part to reports that Chinese regular army reinforcements were moving northward along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway and also toward Peiping from Paotingfu. These reports were not confirmed.

Japanese forces had regained full control of Tungchow, 20 miles east of Peiping, where supposedly pro-Japanese gendarmes yesterday turned on the small Japanese garrison and for several hours threatened to annihilate it.

Japanese aviators bombed and machine-gunned the Chinese, helping lift the siege. Japanese infantry reinforcements arrived at Tungchow late today. The Japanese said

Committee Ready To Write Tax Bill

By the Associated Press.

A Congressional tax committee, in agreement on proposed methods for sealing revenue law loopholes, arranged yesterday to put their recommendations into bill form next week.

Members did not disclose what suggestions they would make to Congress.

But they have dropped hints that the legislation might increase surtaxes, restrict deductions allowed to personal holding companies, adjust deductions for such incorporated hobbies as yachts and boost the levies on nonresident aliens.

Committeemen indicated the Administration desires to have the legislation enacted before adjournment so it may apply to the present calendar year and produce some $150,000,000 to $250,000,000 of additional revenue.

Flying Codona Shoots His Wife and Ends Life As She Seeks Property Settlement on $50,000

World's Greatest Aerial Artist Uses Pistol in Law Office.

By the United Press.

Long Beach, Calif., July 30.—While his mother-in-law looked on, Alfredo Codona, 43, considered the world's greatest aerial trapeze performer, shot and critically wounded his estranged wife today and then killed himself, police reported.

The wife, Vera Bruce, 31, herself a noted trapeze artist, was near death from four wounds—in the head, the breast, the abdomen and the arm.

Codona met his wife and her mother, Mrs. Annie Bruce, in the downtown office of Attorney James E. Pawson to effect a property settlement. The small, nervous performer, after talking calmly for several minutes, asked Pawson to leave the room. He then locked the door.

Mrs. Bruce said Codona lit a cigarette for his wife and remarked:

"Vera, I guess this is the last thing I can do for you."

He drew a pistol from his pocket, fired four times at short range at his wife, then shot himself once. He died instantly.

Miss Bruce filed suit for divorce on June 28 of this year, charging her husband with cruelty and extreme jealousy. She was forced to leave town to fulfill a circus engagement that day, and was granted an interlocutory decree several hours after the action was entered in Long Beach Superior Court. The property settlement involved today was for $50,000.

Codona's first wife, Lillian Leitzel, also a world-famous aerialist, crashed to death in Copenhagen, Denmark, in 1931 while performing.

Codona was considered without a peer in his profession until two years ago when he slipped from a bar 60 feet above the ground and broke almost every bone in his body. He recovered, but since the fall has been relegated to minor roles.

Friends said he was extremely proud, and occasionally brooded because he no longer could perform his daring feats.

Codona had been nervous all day, according to his friends, although he assumed his usual cheerful smile when he met them. Newspaper acquaintances said he had told them this afternoon he had an appointment to meet his estranged wife in an attorney's office, and he displayed considerable agitation.

The Codona troupe of aerialists, known as "The Flying Codonas," toured the world several times and were classed as the outstanding circus feature in their line. Members of the troupe were Alfredo, his brother Lalo, and Lillian Leitzel, Alfredo's first wife. Her death crash in the Danish capital shocked the amusement world and

Battle Raging After Granada Troops Revolt

By the Associated Press.

Valencia, Spain (Saturday), July 31.—Reports from the civil war front five miles from Granda early today said fighting apparently was continuing in a revolt in the insurgent-held provincial capital.

Bomb explosions could be heard and the Fabra (Spanish) news agency in a dispatch from Gibraltar said the uprising was more furious than at first was believed. It said insurgent authorities were struggling desperately to localize the revolt.

The agency said the trouble started when Spanish soldiers were ordered from their barracks to make way for Italian volunteers fighting with the insurgents.

(Spanish government communique, via Hendaye, France, said earlier outbursts of shooting and fire in Granada indicated an unsuccessful uprising by Moorish troops.)

At the same time there were other government reports of conflict within insurgent-held territory.

The defense ministry said government troops had heard a battle proceeding between two groups of insurgent soldiers on the Santander front in north Spain which ended after insurgent planes flew over the area, firing machine guns and dropping bombs and hand grenades.

Official reports from Madrid said insurgent troops from other fronts had to be sent to Malaga on the south coast recently to put down an "uprising" when a large group of Communist workers besieged insurgent military headquarters in the city.

Several days later, the reports said, another group of workers occupied a sugar factory and remained

Senate Decides To Act Quickly On Wages Bill

Will Vote Today; Close Fight Expected on Recommitment.

By Robert C. Albright.

Torn three ways by Southern eloquence, a divided labor stand and urgent Administration appeals, the Senate last night decided to cut short debate on the beleaguered wages and hours bill this afternoon, and to seal its fate for better or worse before nightfall.

An extremely close vote on a motion to send the measure back to committee appeared likely, under impetus of a South in full cry against the bill. A delayed Southern raid on the legislation was led yesterday by Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, former Administration pillar, and Senator Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith, of South Carolina.

But mounting strength for a motion to recommit the bill was seriously checked by President William Green, of the American Federation, despite his known distaste for the present bill Green declared against recommitting the measure after a visit to the White House. He said it does not meet labor's expectations, but the House might improve it.

A. F. of L. Divided.

His statement precipitated a schism in the Federation's own ranks. Lobbies were full of trades union officials urging Senators to stop the bill. John P. Frey and J. W. Williams, presidents, respectively, of the metal and building trades departments of the A. F. of L., issued a joint statement asking that the bill "be recommitted so that the subject can receive the consideration which is so necessary under the circumstances."

Virginia Cherrill, U. S. Actress, Is Married to Earl of Jersey

By the Associated Press.

London, July 30.—Blonde Virginia Cherrill, of the movies, became a countess today, after waiting ten minutes for her bridegroom.

She married the Earl of Jersey, a dark and handsome man of 27, at the Chelsea Register Office, a couple of miles from the Caxton Hall Register Office, where she wed Actor Cary Grant in 1934. The earl also had been married before.

The 29-year-old actress from Carthage, Ill., tapped her foot impatiently for ten minutes before the earl arrived smartly clad in morning clothes. Police had to clear a passage through the crowd, although the couple had tried to keep the hour of the ceremony secret.

She said she was through with acting.

"It's a happy married life for me now," she said.

The Earl—who is also Viscount Grandison, Viscount Villiers and Baron Hoo—said he had asked Miss Cherrill to quit the films.

He inherited three country estates totaling almost 20,000 acres when his father died in 1923, but he said they would not live in the country home.

Miss Cherrill was divorced from Grant in March, 1935. She met the Earl at a party a year ago. The Earl's divorce from Patricia Kenneth Richards, of Cootamundra, New South Wales, became absolute last week.

Fish Leap Ashore And Bathers Pile Them in Baskets

Los Angeles, July 30 (AP).—Fish by the dozen came ashore and virtually jumped into the laps of delighted anglers at Playa del Rey Beach.

That, at any rate, is their story and the fishermen are sticking to it—with the moral support of W. L. Scofield, ichthyologist of the State game and fish laboratory.

No one knows why—but suddenly there were fish on the beach and startled onlookers scurried in search of baskets and gunny sacks to harvest them.

Witnesses said there was a great spashing offshore, with clusters of gulls causing a commotion overhead. Then a big wave washed an entire school of fish up on the sand.

They mostly were small fish—smelt, sardine and herring—but there also were a few big bonita, barracuda and yellowtail.

Scotfield didn't hazard an explanation, but he testified that once tons of herring and sardines had come ashore at Monterey Bay, possibly because a poisonous organic life had developed in the water.

Omha, Refloated, Begins Trip to Norfolk Yards

The cruiser Omaha, which was floated Wednesday after being aground on a reef off Castle Island Light in the Bahamas, started for the Navy Yard, Norfolk, Va., at 4 p. m. yesterday, the Navy Department announced.

She will proceed under her own power, but will be convoyed by the battleship Texas and the minesweeper Mallard.

D.C. Shaping Tax Staff for New Levies

To Seek Funds for More Workers; Conferees Reach Accord.

Action in Senate, House Delayed by Failure to Call Bill.

By James D. Secrest.

With Senate and House conferees in accord on the District tax bill, Auditor Daniel J. Donovan last night was figuring out how much money and how large a staff of additional employes will be needed to collect some $9,000,000 in extra taxes this year.

The Commissioners plan to ask the Budget Bureau to submit an estimate to Congress next week so that an appropriation can be included in the last deficiency bill.

Senate and House action on the conference report was delayed until next week yesterday when Chairman Palmisano, of the House managers, failed to call it up in the House before adjournment was taken until Monday.

Senator King, of the Senate District Committee, will wait until the House acts before asking for Senate approval.

House Passage Predicted.

House conferees confidently predicted that the House will accept the conference report despite reported Administration dissatisfaction with the Tydings rider on price resale maintenance.

As 42 States have laws which would be sanctioned by the waiving of the Sherman antitrust law with regard to price-fixing contracts between manufacturers and retailers, sponsors of the Tydings rider believe that the majority of members will approve it.

There was some speculation on Capitol Hill as to the possibility of a Presidential veto of the tax bill on account of the rider, but there was no substantial ground for the fear so far as could be learned.

It was disclosed yesterday that the Tydings rider was adopted by the conferees by a margin of one vote after one of the House managers, irked at a roundabout order, allegedly from the White House, that the President wanted the Tydings rider eliminated, changed his mind.

This member, it was said, had decided to vote against the rider on the ground that it was improper on the District tax bill. When informed by Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, that the President had sent word by him to vote against it, the member voted for the rider.

House leaders were obviously peeved at the failure of the conferees to strike out the rider, but declined to comment.

As agreed on Thursday, the frequently amended tax bill contains three new levies, a 25-cent increase in the realty and personal property tax, and a strengthening of the intangible personal property tax act.

Realty Hard Hit.

Realty owners, despite the fact that they already bear 60 per cent of the city tax burden, will have to contribute about $3,125,000 of the estimated $7,000,000 deficit.

The next largest share will come from business and professional groups. That will be approximately $3,000,000, according to present estimates, on the basis of a levy of two-fifths of 1 per cent of gross income, except for a primary $2,000 exemption.

Motorists will pay an additional $1,500,000 for the use of Washington streets. The tax is graduated from $5 to $12 depending on the weight classification of the private passenger car. Commercial rates are higher.

Insurance Frauds Are Charged to 39

New York, July 30 (AP).—Thirty-nine persons, including ten physicians and eight lawyers, were listed today in 15 Federal indictments charging use of the mail to defraud in an alleged disability insurance racket.

The indictments charge attorneys would coach holders of disability life insurance how to feign heart disease and then take them to physicians employed by the "ring." The indictments also charge the doctors followed through with false medical histories and diagnoses.

Coast Police Seize Suspect In 1930 Jake Lingle Murder

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 30.—Detectives arrested Roy G. Ward, 38, of Hollywood, on a worthless check charge today, then booked him on suspicion of murder on his own statement that he killed Alfred (Jake) Lingle, Chicago newspaper reporter, in 1930.

Detective Lieuts. Fred Trosper, S. H. Jackson and W. E. Waters said Ward told them his true name is Frankie Fisher, long sought on two Chicago warrants as a participant in the Lingle assassination.

Chicago police were asked to check details of Ward's story.

Leo Brothers was convicted in the Lingle case after it had remained a mystery some time and is serving 14 years to life in Joliet Prison.

The detectives here said Ward told this story:

He was a friend of the late "Machine Gun" Jack McGurn and Frankie Pope. In 1930, McGurn gave Ward a snub-nosed pistol and told him he "had a job" for him. Pope took Ward to a pedestrian tunnel leading into an Illinois Central Railway station on Chicago's Michigan boulevard and pointed out Lingle. Ward shot him and fled, then went to a hideout at Fox Lake.

The detectives said, however, there were discrepancies between Ward's story and other reports on the Lingle case.

For one thing, they explained, Ward said he gave the pistol to a friend at Fox Lake, whereas the gun apparently used to kill Lingle was found near his body.

Copeland Asks Reform On Inland Ship Lines To Prevent Disasters

Ship Fire Inquiry Opens Today With Two Aboard Still Missing

Alcohol, Sugar Were in Hold; Captain Praises Crew, Gives 'Calmness' Credit for Saving 89; Five Boats Launched.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., July 30.—The Bay steamship City of Baltimore, a "ball of fire" last night, was a ghost-like shell off Seven-Foot Knoll today as a Federal Board of Inquiry, appointed in Washington, prepared to open hearings tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock in the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce Building.

Two of the 93 passengers and crew were known to be dead today. They were drowned. Two others, a passenger and an oiler, were missing. Six were hurt, but not seriously.

"I wouldn't even think of sabotage under ordinary circumstances, but the idea has been running through my head. I say this because of the amazing way in which the fire spread all over the boat."

Capt. H. C. Shepheard, acting director of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation of the Department of Commerce, who arrived at the scene of the disaster at 3 a. m. today from Washington, learned that there were drums of alcohol in the hold of the ship, together with 2,000 bags of sugar. Both are highly inflammable. There also were a number of automobiles on a lower deck, their tanks containing gasoline.

The small loss of life in what had the makings of a major sea disaster was a matter of astonishment and thanksgiving in Baltimore and the Chesapeake Bay area today.

Had the ship been 15 miles farther down the bay on her way to Norfolk, authorities said, the loss of life might have been greater.

But Capt. Shepheard credited the fortunate escape of 89 out of 93 persons to the calmness and efficiency of the officers and crew. He said:

"From all accounts, on every hand, there is no question in my mind that there would have been a large loss of life had it not been for the splendid courage and seamanship shown by the officers and members of the crew of the City of Baltimore. Particularly so, in view of the quick spread of the fire and the intensity of the heat.

"In the face of appalling odds, they launched 5 out of 6 lifeboats without any unnecessary confusion.

Offers Bill Requiring Passenger Lists to Be Kept Ashore.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, Capitol Hill's foremost advocate of safety at sea, last night expressed hope that the City of Baltimore disaster would cause owners of inland passenger ships to "see the light" and agree to a program of reform.

Copeland offered such a program, as follows:

All sizeable passenger ships plying rivers, bays or lakes to be equipped with radio apparatus.

All such ships to be required to deposit on shore a list of their passengers before every trip. He introduced a bill yesterday making mandatory such a requirement, and prescribing a fine of from $100 to $500 for violations.

All such ships to have a doctor, or, at least, a trained nurse and a small hospital.

Fire Its Own S.O.S.

The City of Baltimore did not have a radio. As it turned out, an S.O.S. was not needed because the vessel was in a narrow part of Chesapeake Bay. Thousands on shore saw the flames leap from her deck, and telephone calls were made for help. Several vessels happened to be nearby for rescue work, together with pleasure launches which put out from the summer colonies.

Had the ill-fated ship been farther down Chesapeake Bay on her way to Norfolk, a different, and more dreadful story may have been the result, despite the courage and seamanship of the officers and crew.

If the purser of the City of Baltimore had died in Thursday night's disaster, and if any large number of passengers had drowned or been burned to death, the identity of many might never have been established.

Only One Passenger List.

The purser had the only list of passengers. There was none in the offices of the steamship line in Baltimore. Under the law, the company was not required to keep such a list.

"There should be a law to cover this," Copeland said, explaining why he had introduced his bill requiring the deposit of passenger lists ashore. "How are we to know how many people are drowned or burned to death in such a disaster? How are we to know who they are?

"In a railroad or airplane disaster, it is different. There are bodies to be picked up and identified. But in a ship disaster, a passenger may be drowned, may be burned beyond recognition or may go down with the ship. For the sake of our peace of mind, we ought to know who is aboard these ships."

The need for more information about passengers was emphasized a month or so ago when Charles F. Keene, a Washington real estate man, disappeared from a Norfolk-bound boat. The purser's list of passengers contained no address.

Mystery of the Sea.

The result was that, for a time, the police were working under a heavy handicap in trying to determine who occupied cabins near Keene. His body subsequently was found in Chesapeake Bay, a bullet in the skull. But how he died, whether he was murdered or committed suicide, is still the subject of controversy.

Senator Copeland, who was a well-known physician before he entered politics, said he thought a passenger ship such as the City of Baltimore ought to have some facilities for taking care of sick or injured persons.

"If not a doctor," he said, "then they ought at least, have a trained nurse, and, of course, a small hospital equipped with medicines and first-aid facilities."

Reverting to the question of ships' radios, Copeland recalled that when he was drafting an amendment to the communications act, owners of ships on the Great Lakes had protested at the expense of installing radio apparatus and hiring operators. They complained, he said, that it would put them at a disadvantage with Canadian ship operators.

"I hope," Copeland said, "that such disasters as happened to the City of Baltimore will make these

Cabinet Bloc Wins Apparent Sugar Victory

House Group Indicates Ban on Refined Product May Be Lifted.

By Sidney Olson.

Three Cabinet Departments won an apparent victory yesterday over the Congressional sugar bloc, and then girded themselves to retain their gains.

State, Interior and Agriculture department chiefs sat in conference with six members of the sugar bloc yesterday. Later the House Agriculture Committee indicated it would revise the present sugar bill to lift restrictions on imports of refined sugar from offshore producers—Hawaii, Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

These restrictions have been found by the three departments, while the Congressional bloc has insisted on them. Although the meeting yesterday broke up without a specific announcement, the committee action was taken as admission of temporary defeat.

Bloc members, however, later said privately that the defeat was merely a strategic retreat to get the controversial bill through the House Rules Committee, where it has languished for weeks.

They said a revised bill will "go like the wind" through the committee, as the Rules members have been co-operating with the departments in blocking the present bill by refusing to give it a rule. Thus the bill has not been able to reach the floor of the House, where swift passage is almost certain.

The minute the bill reaches the House floor it will be vigorously amended to restore the stringent restrictions, bloc members said. The rigid limits on refined-sugar imports will be slapped back on the bill at once, it was indicated.

The Congressmen from the two cane-sugar States—Florida and Louisiana—have lined up with the departments in favor of eliminating the restrictions, and in pleading for "fair treatment" for the Territories.

Protests by Andrews.

Senator Claude O. Andrews (Democrat), Florida, yesterday protested by telegram to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, and Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace against the pending bill and against any continuation of the

U. S. Postpones Mattern Polar Flight for Year

License Will Be Issued for Russian Hop Not in June or July.

Jimmy Mattern, noted Texas airman, yesterday received a permit from the Bureau of Air Commerce for a transpolar flight "early next year" from San Diego, Calif., to Moscow, U. S. S. R.

The decision to postpone the flight was reached at a conference between Commerce Department officials, Mattern, and members of his flight organization, which was held in the office of Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson.

The Texas flier indicated that he was "encouraged by the arrangements. I am pleased by the decision. The Government is really interested in my flight, but they want to be sure that the flight will be a success, so I'm going to wait," he commented. After his return to his hotel Mattern made a statement saying that the hop over the top of the world would be made during the month of June or July next year.

"Hank" Jones, his navigator, said the added time would be put to good use in making further preparation for the arduous journey which may lead to the establishment of a commercial air route over the polar regions. "We've made preparations for this flight since last October," Jones said, "and the additional time we now have plus the full cooperation of the various government agencies interested in this survey trip should make it a great success."

The two flyers had hoped to take off on their pole-jumping exploit late next month. Commerce Department officials have contended, however, that the two men are not sufficiently well-versed in the science of polar navigation to make the flight with safety during the Arctic summer season this year.

"The flight is being postponed," they said, "because we felt that the flyers should be able to maintain contact with radio stations during the entire time of their flight, and to establish their position at all times from radio signals sent to them."

To fulfill these requirements, Mattern has recently been studying

U.S. Debt at Peak Of $36,707,757,744

By the Associated Press.

A $50,000,000 issue of discount bills lifted the public debt to a new peak of $36,707,757,744 on July 28, Treasury reports showed yesterday.

The bill issue was one of a weekly series with which Secretary Morgenthau is putting new cash into the Treasury's working balance.

The balance stands now at $940,618,961, and Morgenthau has said he wishes to keep it around the billion mark because of troubled conditions abroad.

The July 28 debt was $3,245,000,000 over that of a year ago and $10,111,000,000 above the wartime high in 1919. Since the fiscal year 1930, the last period in which Government income matched spending, the debt has increased $20,512,000,000.

President Roosevelt has said that a $2,000,000,000 increase in the debt during the first half of this year resulted largely from operation of the Treasury's gold "sterilization program" and issuance of obligations to Government trust funds, such as the social security reserve fund.

U. S. Breaks Up Price-Fixing by 19 Companies

Allocation of Areas for Brush Sales Also to Be Abandoned.

By William V. Nesslv.

In the midst of numerous other antitrust investigations and court cases under way throughout the country, the Department of Justice yesterday announced the breaking up, through a consent decree, of an alleged price-fixing combination involving manufacturers of the greater part of the country's household and industrial brushes.

In the United States District Court for Southern New York, the Government obtained an order restraining 19 brush manufacturers and two other defendants from engaging in the practices charged, agreeing upon prices and alloting or allocating customers.

Maintenance of minimum prices and alloting of customers to particular manufacturers has been under way for several years, the Government charged, and meetings have been held in numerous cities in furtherance of such agreements.

Two Individuals Named.

In addition to the companies named in the action, it was charged that John H. Galloway served as an "arbitrator" or "co-ordinator" to investigate any breaches of the agreements and report the facts to the entire group. The other individual defendant, Thomas A. Unsworth, was identified as a dealer in raw materials used in the industry who was said to have counseled and assisted the other defendants in promoting the combination.

The companies in the action were Ox Fibre Brush Co., Inc.; Indiana Ox Fibre Brush Co., Inc.; National Brush Co.; Joseph O. Flatt & Co., Inc.; Empire Brush Works, A. Laitner & Sons, the Osborn Manufacturing Co.; A. Steiert & Son, Phoenix Brush Co., Inc.; Wright-Bernet, Inc.; S. A. Felton & Son Co., Illinois Duster Co., Interchangeable Brush Co., Inc.; Los Angeles Brush Manufacturing Corporation; Maguire Bros. Brush Co.; Michigan Brush Manufacturing Co., Inc.; the Milwaukee Brush Manufacturing Co.; Moran Bros., and the Weil-Ransom Co.

Meanwhile, the 50 attorneys of the anti-trust division of the Justice Department, recently reorganized under the direction of Robert H. Jackson, are pursuing a wide range of investigations, several of which have already resulted in court action, charging restraint of trade forbidden by the Sherman act.

Engaging the immediate attention of the division is the approaching criminal trial of some 80 oil companies of the Midwest, in which combinations to fix prices, maintenance of a buying pool and other illegal practices are alleged. Indictments were returned at Madison, Wis., after protracted investigation by the division. The case, one of the outstanding ones in the antitrust activities of the department, is scheduled for trial at Madison October 4.

Nation-Wide Investigation.

While oil producers of some 14 Midwest States are involved in the case, investigation of reported similar practices by producers on both the West Coast and in the East also is actively under way, it was learned yesterday, putting the oil industry from coast to coast under scrutiny.

Another Nation-wide quiz approaching the litigation stage is that covering practices of distributors in the entire motion picture industry. Already one case involving, in general, the same line of complaint being investigated throughout the industry, has resulted in a court suit. The Government has charged the Interstate Circuit, in Texas, with imposing arbitrary zoning and clearance regulations among movie exhibitors, and the outcome of that hearing may have an important bearing on the Nation-wide procedure.

It is alleged that in many instances unreasonable regulations discriminatory in favor of certain exhibitors are enforced, giving favored theater operators exclusive rights to first-run pictures and enforcing unreasonable delay before others are granted second-run rights.

Holding that some delay on second runs is reasonable, Justice Department officials emphasize that they are not making a general attack of the distributors. Rather, it has been pointed out, unreasonable discrimination against independent exhibitors is the target aimed at.

Aluminum Suit Held Up.

In addition to these cases, much attention is being given the anti-trust case against the Aluminum Company of America, held up at present by court injunction, and involving jurisdictional questions.

Required to give approximately one-fourth of their time to litigation under regulatory statutes of the various governmental departments, attorneys of the division also are carrying on study of complaints against leaders in numerous other industries, about which no announcements are being made at this stage.

Germany Won't Reduce Airships, Says Goering

Frankfort, Germany, July 30 (U.P.).—Col. Gen. Hermann Goering, German air minister, announced today his investigation of the Hindenburg dirigible disaster led to a decision to "continue German airship traffic to the same extent as heretofore."

Goering made the announcement through a subordinate of the air ministry at a meeting of the German Union of Airdromes here. It was said that Frankfort would have a pivoting dirigible hangar in use before the end of 1939.

Attorneys Act to Clear Pastor Held in Murder

Pittsfield, Ill., July 30 (AP).—Attorneys for the Rev. C. E. Newton, former Paris, Mo., Baptist minister, filed a motion in circuit court today to quash an indictment charging him with the slaying of his "devoted friend," Mrs. Dennis Kelly.

The petition alleged that Newton was "kidnaped and decoyed" from Paris by officials of Marion and Monroe counties, Mo., and Pike County, Ill., and brought here against his will. Newton is charged with having struck and killed Mrs. Kelly with a hammer July 13 after a roadside quarrel.

Lethargy for Reforms Reveals President Now Has His Hands Tied.

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

If further evidence is needed of the contention made in this place a week ago that because of lessened "social pressures" President Roosevelt can no longer do as he wishes, it is to be found on Capitol Hill.

Pending before the Senate is a comparatively mild minimum wage and maximum working hours bill. If we are to have such legislation, the provisions in the pending bill constitute about the least which might be demanded. And yet the Administration forces are experiencing the utmost difficulty in steering that measure to enactment.

Even organized labor is indifferent to the measure or clearly hostile. Only a few ardent New Dealers seem to care a hang whether the bill is passed—and if it is finally enacted into law at this session of Congress it will surprise a good many observers on Capitol Hill.

It is the same old story that public pressure for social and economic reforms diminishes with the return of prosperity. A Senate which now fights bitterly over a simple measure to impose a 40-hour maximum work week and a minimum wage of 40 cents and hour, with loopholes for many, many exceptions, four years ago passed a strict 30-hour maximum work week bill and then later imposed the NRA on the country without batting an eye.

The situation regarding farm legislation is similar. The farm organizations cannot agree on an agricultural stabilization program and the representatives on Capitol Hill from the farm States are indifferent to pending proposals. It has been years since the farm lobby in Washington is as impotent as at the present time—chiefly because they cannot stir up the farmers back home.

With crops good and prices high, the dirt farmers are too busy looking over new automobiles, driving the family into town for an evening at the movies and planning vacation trips this fall to be concerned about things in Washington. Perhaps next year or the year after, howls may go up again from the Kansas plains and Iowa fields—but this year everyone is just to happy. When things are going right, farmers as well as labor prefer the status quo.

* * *

Incidentally, a subject of much curiosity and speculation around the Capital concerns the absence of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace. For the last several weeks he has been vacationing in Colorado. He is not expected back for another week or so. Many persons believe that this queer the Secretary of Agriculture has chosen to take a vacation during a crucial period when President Roosevelt has been trying to get action out of Congress on a farm bill.

Some of the inner New Deal circle are spreading the report that Secretary Wallact, once the fair-haired boy at the White House and regarded by many as President Roosevelt's preferences as a successor, has fallen from favor. They say Mr. Roosevelt is displeased with Secretary Wallace because the latter failed to drum up militant farm support for the Supreme Court reorganization bill.

As soon as a fellow gets close to the throne around here, the whispers start and the knives come out. After Alva Johnston's "White House Tommy" article in this week's Saturday Evening Post, Thomas Corcoran and Benjamin Cohen had better watch out.

* * *

Several friends returning from vacation trips around the country contend John L. Lewis is more responsible than any other person for the defeat of the Supreme Court bill. Their point, based on conversations with persons in a half-dozen Middle West and Southwest States is that C. I. O. activities throughout the spring gravely alarmed the small business men of the Nation—who constitute the balance of political power in this country. With sit-down strikes, marching mobs and the general disorders attending the C. I. O. strikes, these merchants and small businessmen suddenly became conscious of the fact that the courts were the bulwarks of their liberties. Consequently, they reacted quickly against any tampering with the courts. We pass the contention along for what it may be worth.

* * *

Remembering all the talk of recent months about plans of the New Dealers to purge the Democratic Party of its conservative brethren, especially those from the South, there are some folks hereabouts who believe the "purge" has taken place. They opine that it was the New Deal element, however, which was purged from the party.

* * *

All of which leads to the widespread belief that President Roosevelt is casting about for a popular and timely subject for a fireside chat in the next few weeks with a view to distracting attention from recent failures and re-establishing himself as a popular hero. The Russians have found polar flights a very satisfactory method of distraction from the "purges" that are occurring in their country. Perhaps a fireside chat will do as well here.

Even press handouts become infected with midsummer silliness. Of three received today, one announces employing printers have organized to fight labor organization. Another announced the International Association of Convention Bureaus will hold a convention at Winnipeg, Canada. The third starts off with the statement that "preventing oral disorders from developing is the most important work of dental science, according to a bulletin today by the Dental Institute of America." Well, dentists, there is a grand opportunity awaiting you on Capitol Hill!

Those notes jotted down by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, the only extant record of the Administration's terms of court bill surrender, have become a valuable collectors' item.

Yesterday the Wyoming Senator received a letter from a New York attorney offering him $100 cash for the little penciled pad sheet carrying the notations.

O'Mahoney suffered momentary panic. He had turned the notes over to Senator M. M. Logan, of Kentucky, who quoted them to the Senate before offering the historic motion to recommit the President's court bill.

Logan returned the notes, without a struggle.

No, O'Mahoney is not going to part with them again, not even for a hundred smackers. He is thinking about framing the penciled sheet and hanging it in his office.

In case you've got a short memory, O'Mahoney was dubbed the "James Madison" of the Judiciary Committee when he shrewdly put in writing the terms offered by Vice President Garner and Majority Leader Barkley, the day the President capitulated.

Later, the notes were made the basis of a formal committee compact. There were to be no Supreme Court enlargement, no "roving" judges and no Supreme Court proctor. A purely procedural lower court bill was to be framed.

The court fight was over when Logan took the agreement to the Senate, and asked for the bill's recommittal.

Bituminous and anthracite coal representatives protested the proposal to set up a national system of power and planning authorities.

John B. Scott, of the Anthracite Institute, was one of the spokesmen of the coal industry appearing at a hearing by the House Rivers and Harbors Committee. He said hard coal producers were opposed to the Norris-Mansfield bill "not only because of its immediate and potential effect on coal marketing and employment, but because it is unsound economically and against the public interest."

Scott said he indorsed "exactly" the views of John D. Battle, executive secretary of the National Coal Association, who urged rejection of the bill on behalf of bituminous producers.

Battle declared:

"Over and above any question of coal, we most respectfully suggest that from every standpoint of national welfare, from every standpoint of the integrity of constitutional government, and the power and authority lodged by the Constitution in the Congress, the proposals contained in these bills—for the setting up of these regional autocratic authorities—ought not to receive congressional approval."

Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, named a six-man sub-committee to conduct the group's investigation of activities of the American Cotton Cooperative Association.

The sub-commitee, of which Smith will act as chairman, will meet today to name an investigator. Other members are Senators Bankhead, Alabama; Thomas, Oklahoma; Bilbo, Mississippi; Hatch, New Mexico, and Ellender, Louisiana, all Democrats.

TENNESSEE SENATORS did not recommend John Lenzie Rogers, whom President Roosevelt nominated to succeed former Judge Hugh M. Tate, of Knoxville, as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Rogers was omitted from a list of "approved" candidates for the position submitted to the President several months ago by Senator Kenneth McKellar and the late Nathan L. Bachman. Rogers, employed by the commission for the last 20 years, is now director of its motor carriers bureau.

McKellar's aides said today the Senator was not ready to announce whether he would favor Rogers' confirmation. Senator George L. Berry, however, said he was advised Rogers, through his many years' service as a member of the commission's staff, was "excellently qualified" to be a commissioner, adding he was willing to accept the President's choice.

The situation regarding Rogers emphasized a patronage impasse that has prevailed since Berry took office. Tennesseeans here acquainted with both Senators said neither was willing to make the concessions necessary for a working agreement on political appointments.

REPRESENTATIVE FISH (Republican, New York) told the House he believed Congress should go on record against a third term for presidents before it adjourns.

He also listed two other matters he said Congress should act on before going home. They were a minimum wage law and a "proper" national housing program.

G.O.P. Indorses LaGuardia for N. Y. Mayoralty

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 30.—The New York County Republican executive committee tonight indorsed the candidacy of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia in the Republican primaries for mayor. A nomination the Fusion incumbent said he would accept if tendered.

The Mayor thus would be pitted in the Republican primaries against Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, designated by Tammany Hall as the Democratic candidate for mayor in the New York County primaries. Senator Copeland also will run in the Republican primaries.

The New York County Republican Committee, in its party, corresponds to Tammany Hall in the Democratic Party.

The Mayor garnered 2,012 out of a total of 2,689 votes in the committee.

LaGuardia was elected four years ago on Fusion ticket, aided by Republicans and Democrats formed into a non-partisan committee.

Since then the growth of the American Labor Party in New York City and the State has led to some talk of his seeking re-election as a candidate of that party, aided by Fusion workers and non-partisan groups.

The mayor indicated he would accept a Republican nomination if it were offered, but said he would not seek it.

For a time he declined to accept two running mates suggested by Kenneth Simpson, New York County Republican leader, but capitulated later.

The choices were Dr. Joseph McGoldrick, an independent Democrat, for comptroller, and Alderman Newbold Morris, a Republican, for council president.

Several weeks ago some thousand Republicans went to the mayor's office to urge him to be the Republican candidate and he announced then what he has since adhered to, that he would not fight for the Republican nomination.

The action of the New York City group, embracing Manhattan, came after the Kings County committee in Brooklyn had agreed to leave the selection of the Republican candidate up to the 23 district leaders and the Bronx County committee had postponed indefinitely a meeting scheduled for tonight.

Truck Driver Hits Parked Car Owned By Md. Magistrate

It was just one justice of the peace after another for Gusta E. Kroll, of Anacostia, D. C., yesterday.

Kroll was driving a truck on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard yesterday when the trailer, carrying a 60-foot pole, allegedly smashed into a parked car at Berwyn.

The crash brought Justice of the Peace Fred C. Lutz, of Riverdale, to the scene. It was the magistrate's car and it had been parked in front of the home of Justice of the Peace George S. Phillips.

In a few minutes, Kroll found himself facing charges of reckless driving and colliding. The warrants were sworn to by Lutz and issued by Phillips.

Flying Boats End Atlantic Survey

New York, July 30 (U.P.).—Two flying boats, navigating through storms and fog, today completed north transatlantic crossings, the second "routine" survey of a planned commercial airline between the United States and Europe.

The Clipper III of Pan-American Airways, flying west to east, landed at Foynes, Ireland, at 5:50 a. m. (E. D. T.), 12 hours and 47 minutes after it took off from Bottwood, Newfoundland.

Buffeted by head winds of near-gale force, British Imperial Airways Cambria landed at Botwood in 14 hours and 48 minutes. At one time it was driven 200 miles south of its route. The same winds sped the Clipper eastward. The Cambria will fly by easy stages to Port Washington, N. Y., and the Clipper will continue on to Southampton.

Arctic Land Found Cut Into 500 Isles

Chicago, July 30 (AP).—Discovery that Resolution Island, Arctic formation north of Labrador, is not one large island but 500 small ones was reported today by wireless from the expedition of Commander Donald B. MacMillan.

The discovery undoubtedly will necessitate a change in maps, navigation charts and atlases which now show Resolution to be a single island about 175 miles long and 50 miles wide.

'Gone With Wind' Suit For Accounting Denied

New York, July 30 (AP).—Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard today dismissed an accounting suit brought by Susan Lawrence Davis, who described herself as a descendant of Jefferson Davis, against the MacMillan Company, publishers.

Judge Goddard rejected Miss Davis' claim that Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind" was a plagiarism of her own work "The Authentic History of the Ku Klux Klan, 1865-1877."

Rankin Assails NLRB's Agents For 'Outrages'

Imperil Administration, Keep Roosevelt in Dark, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi declared yesterday "outrages" perpetrated by representatives of the National Labor Delations Board are threatening to wreck the Roosevelt Administration.

Taking issue with the President's recent statement that the board has been fair to both capital and labor, Rankin declared the Chief Executive evidently had been misinformed.

The Mississippian expressed belief that Mr. Roosevelt would "call a halt" if he knew the facts. The facts are, he declared, that outrages have been committed by board agents in conjunction with communistic influences; that small manufacturers now are being subjected to "inquisitions" and that brutal treatment has been meted out to citizens by "this unholy combination" under the pretense that it has Administration backing.

Protests From All States.

Rankin told the House that within the last 36 hours he has received protests against labor board activities from every State in the Union. Board representatives, he said, are promoting strikes in the South.

If the board's activities are not checked, and the wage and hour bill now before the Senate is passed in its present form and upheld by the Supreme Court, it probably will mean "the end of human liberty as we know it," Rankin contended.

He appealed to Southern and Western Senators to shelve the wage and hour measure until the next session of Congress "or until it can be more thoroughly studied."

Vandenberg's Warning.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, also sounded a warning that "demonstrated weaknesses" of the Wagner labor relations act, which the Labor Board administers, may invite "radical reprisals" if unchanged.

Replying to statements of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, criticizing labor act amendments which Vandenberg proposed, the Michigan Senator said:

"I deny that they (the amendments) are a 'bold attempt'—or any other kind of an 'attempt'—to restrict the freedom of self-organization of workers' or to 'nullify the effectiveness of democratic self-government of unions,' as charged by you. Furthermore, I respectfully submit that this bitter indictment is in no degree borne out by your own bill of particulars."

C. U. Professor Sent to Buffalo

The Rev. John H. Kennedy, a professor at the Oblate Scholasticate at Catholic University, yesterday was named to head the Juniorate at Holy Angel College, Buffalo, the Associated Press reported. Announcement of the transfer was made at Lowell, Mass., by the Very Rev. James T. McDermott, O. M. I., provincial of the First American Oblate Order.

Father McDermott also announced that the Rev. C. Wohlrab, of the Oblate Scholasticate here, and the Rev. James Kerrigan, of Buffalo, both have been transferred to the Holy Angel Community in Buffalo.

The Rev. James C. Sullivan has been appointed bursar of the Oblate Scholasticate here. Father McDermott at the same time made public that the Rev. Clement Flynn, superior of the Oblate Novitiate in Tewksbury, Mass., has been transferred to lead a band of missionaries in Richmond, Va.

New Russian Hop Is Expected Soon

Edmonton, Alberta, July 30 (Canadian Press).—Maj. E. G. Genet, director of the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals, said today he had been informed a third Soviet Russian transpolar flight from Moscow to the United States would start "within a few days."

Maj. Genet said his information came from Washington. The two previous flights were started amid unusual secrecy. Sigismund Levaneffsky, the Soviet "Lindbergh," is expected to make the third flight, with a possible refueling stop at Fairbanks, Alaska.

Hungarian Pretender Hurt in Plane Landing

Buenos Aires, July 30 (AP).—Archduke Albrecht, pretender to the vacant Hungarian throne, escaped with slight injuries today as the airplane in which he was riding on a pleasure trip made a forced landing in the upper Paran River.

Both the archduke and his pilot, who also was injured slightly, were flung from the plane and rescued by a freighter.

The Speaker Has Headaches, Too

Man Who Shrank 5 Inches Saved by Gland Operation

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, July 30.—Hans Nelson, who shrank ten inches in height in five years, today credited a gland operation with saving his life and putting him "on top of the world."

He's gaining strength, he said, eating "anything," taking automobile trips and enjoying life. He's pleased also to know his case has aided others so afflicted.

Two years ago surgeons removed half of his parathyroid glands in an effort to stop the de-calcification of his bones that reduced his stature. He had been shrinking for 15 years until he was a stooped man of 5 feet.

Nelson still is 5 feet tall but said he was growing stronger "every day" and looking forward to the time when he will be even more active.

"As far as my life was concerned," Nelson said of his operation, "I figured I was gone. I made a try though, and I'm glad of it. This has been the most wonderful summer since I have been sick."

Off his earlier calcium diet, Nelson now eats regular meals. Dr. Richard Johnson, of University of Minnesota Hospital, who handled the case, said he was convinced Nelson's case was an example of osteo-malacia, or softening of the bone. The parathroid glands control mineralization of the bones. Overactive, they can drain the calcium and other minerals from the bones into the bloodstream, sometimes depositing them in other organs where they "petrify" them.

Nelson said doctors had written him from as far away as South Africa to learn of the treatment. One woman in Africa was helped as he was, Nelson said, by a diagnosis her doctor made by mail.

President Leaves On Potomac Trip

President Roosevelt departed last night on a week-end cruise down the Potomac, determined to remain within two or three hours distance of Washington so he might return quickly in case the Sino-Japanese situation becomes critical. Until late in the afternoon the President withheld definite decision on making the trip.

Aboard the yacht were Secretary of Interior Ickes; Senator Green, of Rhode Island; Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Capt. Paul Bastedo, naval aide, and Miss Marguerite LeLand, secretary.

Death Toll Reaches 28 In French Rail Wreck

Villeneuve St. Georges, France, July 30 (AP).—The number killed in the wreck of the Paris-St. Etienne Express rose to 28 tonight with the death of another passenger. Fifty persons were injured when the train, hitting an open switch near here last night, was derailed. Charges of negligence were brought against two switchmen.

As a result of the accident, the Cabinet condemned the use of wooden railway cars, such as those in which many of the victims were killed, and decided to expedite construction of steel cars.

3 Wound Guard, Flee Chain Gang

La Grange, Ga., July 30 (U.P.).—Three convicts, armed with weapons stolen from a storage house, "crushed" out of the Troup County Chain Gang tonight, wounding a guard with rifle fire as they fled.

The Troup County gang is the prison concentration camp around which Robert Elliott Burns built his story "I Am a Fugitive From a Georgia Chain Gang."

Security Board Vacancy Filled By President

Bigge's Name Is Sent to Senate; 3 Diplomatic Appointments Made.

The vacancy on the Social Security Board was filled yesterday when President Roosevelt sent to the Senate the nomination of George Edmund Bigge, of Brown University, to succeed John G. Winant, who resigned last winter.

Three diplomatic appointments also were made by the President. Frederick A. Sterling, of Texas, minister to Bulgaria, was named minister to Estonia and Latvia, succeeding Arthur Bliss Lane, who was named minister to Yugoslavia. He will succeed Charles S. Wilson there. Lane's additional post as minister to Lithuania was filled by appointment of Owen J. C. Norem, of Montana.

Nomination Withdrawn.

Bigge's appointment to the Local Security Board followed an earlier appointment of Murray W. Latimer, chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board, but the nomination was withdrawn when it was discovered that Latimer and the other two members of the board were all Democrats, while the law provides no more than two members may be of the same political party. Winant, former Governor of New Hampshire, is a Republican.

Bigge, a native of Michigan, since 1930 has been a member of the staff of the Bureau of business research at Brown, and is head of the economics department of the university.

Is Labor Adviser.

He was chairman of the Rhode Island Interstate Compact Commission, concerned with promotion of Interstate labor compacts. He also was economic expert of the committee which drafted the Rhode Island unemployment compensation act and was appointed first chairman of the Unemployment Compensation Commission of that State, in which capacity he served until October, 1936.

He long has been active as adviser in labor movements and is the author of numerous published works on economic subjects, particularly in the fields of technological unemployment, wage rates, use of machinery and the social security program.

Other members of the board are Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman, and Vincent M. Miles.

Truce Rejected By 98 Striking Homesteaders

Tygart's Valley Farmers Will Deal Only With High Officials.

By the Associated Press.

Elkins, W. Va., July 30.—Tanned farmers who co-operated to build the Government's $1,000,000 Tygart's Valley homesteads mustered that same co-operation today behind their three-day-old strike which has halted construction on 24 additional settlement homes.

From a "strike headquarters" set up in an abandoned building on the 2,500-acre Resettlement Administration community 12 miles from Elkins, the board of strategy led the strike of 98 men homesteaders.

They refused to negotiate a settlement of their complaints of mismanagement and inefficiency with "anyone except higher Resettlement Administration officials." They spoke for the Tygart Valley Association, a communal agricultural enterprise operated in conjunction with the homestead.

D. F. Comey, construction engineer, suggested the men return to their jobs, for which they receive from 40 to 70 cents an hour, until an investigation could be made by the administration chiefs in Washington.

L. Wade Coberly, resident engineer, insisted that the strike was called by a group who wanted to dictate to the management personnel. He said he had received no advice from Washington as to any possible intervention in the strike.

Buffalo Parley Fails.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 30 (AP).—Employer representatives in Buffalo's 10-day-old meat packing strike peace negotiations today rejected wage demands of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Thomas Finn, U. S. Department of Labor mediator, said "further discussion will be useless until the companies change their position."

Strike leaders retorted they would would file charges with the National Labor Relations Board accusing the companies of Wagner labor act violations.

"Independent" Unions Gather.

Eighty delegates, described as from more than a dozen States, gathered behind closed doors at the call of the independent chocolate workers of Hershey.

One leader unofficially made plain the federation will battle both the American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, for members.

Indianapolis, July 30 (AP).—Hartford Larison, secretary of the Indiana Workers' Alliance, announced today a picket line would be established tomorrow around Works Progress Administration headquarters here to protest "the starvation budget upon which WPA workers are forced to exist."

Ford Beating Testimony.

Detroit, July 30 (AP).—A legal brief filed by the Ford Motor Co. in 1931 was used today to assail the company's contention that union organizers beaten near the Ford plant May 26 were trespassing.

The testimony marked the final day of a hearing on the National Labor Relations Board's complaint charging the Ford company with unfair labor practices and with instigating assaults on members of the United Automobile Workers trying to distribute handbills near the plant. Records of the hearing were sent to Washington for a decision.

Maurice Sugar, U. A. W. attorney, read the Ford brief which was filed with the Michigan Supreme Court six years ago. It contended the Eagle avenue underpass approaching the Ford River Rouge plant was "inherently public" property.

Pittsburgh, July 30 (AP).—John L. Lewis, generalissimo of the C. I. O., today named Paul W. Fuller, regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee at Cincinnati, as provisional president of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers.

The announcement was made tonight by John Brophy, C. I. O. director. Fuller succeeds Glen W. McCabe, who resigned yesterday and whose leadership of the union came under the fire of its executive board, which six months ago demanded his ouster.

Japanese Planes Bomb Rockefeller Foundation Gift to University

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Japanese gunners and planes laid down a second day's barrage of shells and bombs at Tientsin, firing buildings and driving thousands from the city. The $500,000 science hall (above) at Nankai University, a gift of the Rockefeller Foundation, was one of the many buildings reported bombed.

their losses in this battle were 20 dead, including two officers and 13 wounded.

The Japanese also reported that Yin Ju-kung, head of the autonomous East Hopeh regime supported by the Japanese army, who was reported to have disappeared in yesterday's melee, was safe under Japanese protection.

Japanese officers at Tientsin announced their operations of the last few days, which enabled them to seize all important points around Peiping, had cost them 151 killed and 298 wounded.

No official estimates of Chinese losses were available.

"Second Steps" Mapped.

Tokyo, July 30 (AP).—The government today laid before Emperor Hirohito plans for "second steps" to deal with Japan's steadily widening conflict with China.

An official announcement said that in view of "the utmost gravity" of the situation in North China, Gen. Sugiyama, war minister, and Admiral Hitsumasa Yonai, navy minister, will make a full report tomorrow morning to a secret joint session of the two chambers of Parliament.

The "steps" reported to the Emperor by Premier Prince Fuminaro Konoye were not disclosed, but authorities indicated they marked a definite advance in the empire's preparations for whatever may arise in China, even war. "First steps" were understood to be the decisions of July 11, when reinforcements were first ordered to China.

Anxiety over the possibility of Soviet Russia taking a hand in the Sino-Japanese conflict found expression in Parliament, when a leading member asked Foreign Minister Koki Hirota whether there was any connection between the central Chinese government and the Comintern-Communist International with headquarters in Moscow.

Hirota said such connection was "quite possible," but added the extent of Soviet government influence could not be determined.

Duchess of Kent Adds 2 Guards for Children

London, July 30 (U.P.).—Two more detectives have joined the four guarding the Duke of Kent's children on their vacation at Bloody Point House in Sandwich, Kent, the Daily Mirror said today.

Slayer of 4 Executed.

Huntsville, Tex., July 30 (AP).—George Patton, 55, died in the electric chair at State prison here today for the murder of a family of four. Two years ago, after confessing he had killed the family in a quarrel over crop division, he led officers to his pasture and dug up the four skeletons.

Girl's Clothing Found, Reviving 'Moon House' Murder of Indian

Hope Grows That Man Jailed as Slayer of Child 5 Years Ago in Idaho Mystery May Regain His Freedom.

By the Associated Press.

Pocatello, Idaho, July 30.—A water-soaked bundle of clothing revived today the 5-year-old "Moon House" murder mystery of the Shoshone-Bannock Indians and brought fresh hope of freedom to Doty Lewis, 59, Indian councilman serving a life term in prison.

Fishermen found the bundle, wrapped in rotted canvas and containing five gingham dresses, a mattress and blankets. It was lodged in a swiftly moving stream, only a few yards from where the nude body of Mabel Sawyer, 13, Indian girl, was found nearly five years ago.

A Federal Bureau of Investigation agent was en route tonight to Fort Hall Reservation to learn, if possible, if the clothing belonged to the slain girl.

The Government in its trial of Doty Lewis, prominent former councilman of the tribe and a member of the Indian police, claimed the girl quarreled with her mother, left home without her clothing and possessions. Circumstantial evidence, Government lawyers said, proved that Lewis saw her at the "Moon House" where she was staying, attacked and killed her.

Finding of the bundle of clothing, however, brings up this question, said Milton Zener, now county attorney, who defended Lewis:

"Would Lewis, if he had killed the girl, return to her home, steal her clothing and bedding just to leave them near the body?"

The "Moon House" in which the girl was living was a tent. An attempt is being made to determine if canvas in which the clothing was wrapped was a part of the "house." Indian custom requires periodic confinement of girls and women in the house.

All Americans In China Strife Safe, Hull Told

Fighting Losing Intensity; Joint U. S. Action With England Denied.

Described by President Roosevelt yesterday morning as very disturbing, the Sino-Japanese controversy later in the day was reported by diplomatic agents in the troubled area to be apparently losing some of its intensity. On the basis of these later reports, the President decided to make his week-end cruise down the river, though keeping prepared to return to the White House immediately should Far Eastern developments justify.

Secretary Hull said his official information was that conditions had become quieter in both Peiping and Tientsin, and that United States nationals were safe, up to that time, in both cities.

Regarding a London report that the United States had joined with other powers in seeking a five-day truce, the Secretary said this Government was not negotiating with anyone in that direction. He termed "interesting" the appeal made Thursday by Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, that officials and others refrain from pressing the President and Secretary of State to tell their plans regarding possible invocation of the neutrality act if the situation becomes more serious. Hull said the statement very well speaks for itself.

Col. Joseph A. McAndrew, commanding the 15th Infantry at Tientsin, Consul General John K. Caldwell and Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson, at Peiping, sent reassuring messages during the day. Col. McAndrew said there had been no unorganized mob violence at Tientsin and that the city was quiet at the time the message was sent. No United States citizens were reported to be in any danger, he added.

Ambassador Johnson said Thursday night passed quietly in Peiping, with the exception of artillery fire to the west outside the city wall, which was heard for about an hour. He said there still was no movement of trains between Peiping and Tientsin, nor to the south of Peiping. Local authorities reported, he added, that the revolt of the Chinese Peace Preservation Corps at Tungchow, near Peiping, had not been entirely suppressed.

Mrs. Sevier Divorces Former Envoy to Chile

Corpus Christi, Tex., July 30 (AP). Mrs. Clara Driscoll Sevier, Democratic National committeewoman from Texas, has been granted a divorce from her husband, H. H. Sevier, former Ambassador to Chile, it was learned today. The divorce was granted July 9.

The petition, filed here last May 20, gave as grounds mental cruelty, resulting in a nervous condition. Mrs. Sevier was in a San Antonio hospital at the time. The Seviers were married in 1907.

Luck Causes Stroke.

Vincennes, Ind., July 30 (AP).—J. O. Henry, an invalid, suffered a stroke today when he learned a gusher oil well had been struck on land adjacent to a farm he formerly owned near Noble, Ill. His condition was reported to be critical. Henry lost the farm during the depression.

Circuit Jurist May Get Seat on SupremeBench

Gov. Murphy's Selection Doubtful; Hutcheson, Bratton Mentioned.

By the Associated Press.

Two high Administration officials predicted last night a lower court judge will be appointed to fill the existing vacancy in the Supreme Court.

Refusing to be quoted by name, they hinted the new justice will be selected from one of the circuits not now represented in the high tribunal.

The officials said four or five circuits have no such representation. Judges in two of these, the Tenth and Fifth, already have been mentioned as possible appointees. They are Judge Sam G. Bratton, of New Mexico, former United States Senator, and Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson, jr., of Texas, former Mayor of Houston.

In effect, the Administration executives threw cold water on current speculation that Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan, exponent of Roosevelt labor policies, might receive the appointment.

Word spread in the Capital last night that Attorney General Cummings has advised the President he may delay the appointment until after Congress adjourns. The Attorney General presented an informal opinion on the question to the President, but it was not made public.

Gov. Murphy, lawyer and former Detroit judge, is scheduled to be a week-end guest aboard the Presidential yacht.

Murphy telegraphed he would be unable to join the President until today, because he had been delayed by a special session of the Michigan Legislature. He will fly to the yacht in a Navy plane.

The President's guests also will include Secretary Ickes, Senator Green (Democrat), Rhode Island; Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Capt. Paul Bastedo, naval aide, and Miss Marguerite Lehand, a secretary.

Mr. Roosevelt said yesterday at a press conference. Murphy's visit was to be purely social.

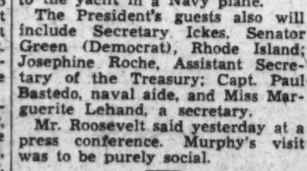
Denies Significance.

Lansing, Mich., July 30 (AP).—Gov. Murphy announced today he had changed his plans for a week-end visit with President Roosevelt and would remain in Lansing until a special legislative session finishes its work.

Murphy had expected to join the President for a cruise tonight. Instead he may fly to Washington Saturday morning.

In connection with rumors that a possible Cabinet appointment or other Federal post might be discussed, Murphy said:

"The President asked me to spend the week-end with him. The invitation was purely to afford a personal visit. I am devoted to the President and his leadership, and am privileged to enjoy a close personal friendship with him. No other significance at all was attached to the invitation."



League Begins Study of Holy Land Partition

British Plea for Immediate Discussion Rejected by Commission.

By the United Press.

Geneva, July 30.—Britain's request for immediate discussion of its Palestine partition plan was rejected today by the League of Nations mandate commission, charged with reporting on the plan to the League Council.

The commission, which began its hearing today in an atmosphere tense with the animosity of Jews and Arabs to the partition project, decided instead to proceed to a study of the Palestine administration during the last two riot-torn years.

It was decided privately after a public session that the commission later will begin examination of the report of the British royal commission, which recommended establishment of Jewish and Arab states in Palestine, these to be separated by a British corridor, including the holy cities of Jerusalem and Bethlehem. The Jewish and Arab states would become independent but the corridor would remain permanently under British mandate.

The British colonial secretary, Sir William Ormsby-Gore, informed the commission that a general stocktaking would be necessary in Palestine and urged independent judgment by the commission on the basis of the British recommendation for partition.

Rabbi Wise Objects.

Geneva, July 30 (AP).—Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, stated the opposition of American Jewish leaders to Britain's plan to partition Palestine in a long talk today with William G. A. Ormsby-Gore, British colonial secretary.

Rabbi Wise stated later:

"Many Jews are being beguiled by the glitter of sovereignty, but this is no more than a by-product of the despair anti-Semitism has evoked in Jewish life.

" * * * We cannot prejudge the Jewish future by giving our signature to a document which creates a Jewish state that will be little more than a mournful, miniature reminder of the Balfour declaration and the British mandate over Palestine."

(By the Balfour declaration of 1917, the British government pledged its "best endeavors" to achieve the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people.)

Va. Taxes Unfair, F. P. Miller Avers

Addressing a political rally in Fairfax, Va., last night, Francis Pickens Miller, Democratic candidate for the Virginia House of Delegates, declared, "In proportion to agriculture, industry in Virginia is not bearing it's just share of taxes."

Declaring against concentration of power in the State government Miller stated he would, if elected, make every effort to increase the economic well-being of citizens of the State, and called attention to the fact that one-third of the population of Virginia has an income of less than $600 a year.

Other points advocated by Miller included a minimum wage and maximum hour law, and a detailed program for the advancement of public schools.

Walter T. Oliver, also a candidate for the House of Delegates, spoke at the rally and included in his platform a full nine months of school, increase of teachers' salaries, practical retirement law for teachers, increase in State appropriation for local schools, and legislation outlawing sit-down strikes. Oliver opposed any change in the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting.

John Galleher, Leesburg, Va., candidate for attorney general, also was a guest speaker

Boy Abductor Captured After Sparing Victim

Robber Forces Merchant to Drive Him to Maryland Shore.

Subdued in a North Beach, Md., restaurant Thursday night after a hand-to-hand battle with the local chief of police, Charles Wilson Barfield, alias Marshall, 18, a former inmate of Lorton Reformatory, was held here last night at the First Precinct Station on a warrant charging attempted kidnaping of Aubrey T. Daly, a Washington merchant.

According to police, Barfield, after robbing the Atlas Sporting Goods Store, 927 D street, held up Daly at Tenth and D streets with stolen pistols, forced him to drive to various points in Washington, then ordered him to drive to North Beach. After arriving at the resort, Barfield ordered Daly to drive back to Washington and to say nothing about the ride, police said.

Barfield was arrested by Chief of Police Henry Haddaway. The police officer said Barfield "pulled a gun" when accosted.

Bullet Wounds In Leg.

Earlier, according to the police officer, Wade Taylor, proprietor of a Turkish bath a tNorth Beach, reported the youth had offered a bath attendant $200 to "keep quiet" about wounds the attendant noticed in the man's leg.

The alleged kidnaper left two loaded pistols in the Turkish bath, Haddaway added.

Barfield was brought back to Washington by Policeman W. C. Grooms and Precinct Detective W. G. Fawcett after being turned over to them by Calvert County authorities. Both officers had been investigating the burglary of the store, heard rumors of the kidnaping and went to see Daly.

After interviewing Daly, Fawcett and Grooms drove to the Maryland resort, where Barfield already had been arrested under the name of Arthur Mills.

Daly, who is president of the Dalymaid Candy Co., 943 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, said he thought it was "all a joke" until he saw Barfield flourish the pistol; then he knew "he meant business."

Directed From Rear Seat.

The merchant said he drove the car around the city and later to North Beach, with Barfield sitting in the back seat covering him with a revolver.

Barfield, according to Daly, said he was going to rob the Hangar Club. He changed his mind, however, then ordered the driver to go up Fourteenth street to see if he could not hold up some liquor stores. Nothing happened, however, and then Barfield gave the order to drive to North Beach.

The candy company executive said Barfield contemplated shooting him at the resort because "you'll tell when you get back." Daly dissuaded him, however, pleading with the man that he would not "turn him in."

Polar 'Heat Wave' Melts Ice Under Scientists' Camp

Moscow, July 30 (AP).—It was so warm at the North Pole that the snow melted around the camp of four Soviet weather observers, they reported today.

Their account of conditions where they are to spend the winter, studying the weather and advising Polar fliers, was the first detailed report in two weeks. The wind had been too light to drive their windmill electric plant, and they had used their batteries only enough to send a brief message daily.

"Our tent is on an ice pedestal," today's report said. "We are taking heroic measures to protect it."

Fortune Teller Blamed For Murder of Wife, 58

Chicago, July 30 (AP).—A fortune teller's counsel was believed by the police to be a reason for the hatchet slaying of Mrs. Clara Frangella, 58, in her home early today.

Police said the woman was wounded fatally by her husband, Dominick, 64. Frangella's son, Dominick, jr., 24, told police his father's mind apparently had become unbalanced by the counsel of a fortune teller who had told him his wife had been "running around with other men."

New York, July 30 (AP).—The State tax appraiser's office said today the late Roy D. Chapin, former president of the Hudson Motor Car Co., left total gross assets of $7,748,293, and a net estate of $7,311,616. Chapin, who lived at Grosse Point Farms, Mich., died February 16, 1936. Mrs. Inez T. Chapin, the widow, and six children inherited most of the estate.

Painters End 2 Weeks Strike On Buildings

Inquiry Is Promised Into Charge Union Scale Wasn't Paid.

Striking painters on Federal building construction jobs returned to work yesterday after a layoff of two weeks. They were assured by the Labor Department that an investigation would be made into their charges that non-union painters were paid less than the union scale.

The workers were told to return to their posts by Bryce P. Holcombe, business agent of the Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers Local, No. 268. Despite his order, however, workmen at the Internal Revenue Building, remained on strike, charging union discrimination.

The dispute began when it was learned workers were being paid $11 for an eight-hour day, whereas the local union rate calls for the same amount for a seven-hour day and double time for the additional hour. Referee Carl Scheider, attorney in the solicitor's office of the Labor Department, announced a hearing in this matter would be held next week.

The Labor Department entered the controversy when Admiral Christian J. Peoples, chief of the Treasury Department Procurement Division, notified them of the strike. The contracts for the construction work was let by Admiral Peoples.

Senate Decides To Act Quickly On Wages Bill

Will Vote Today; Close Fight Expected on Recommitment.

bor Edward F. McGrady, called to the White House with Green, immediately went to the Capitol to work for passage.

From New York, Secretary of Labor Perkins, who would play an important role in administering the measure, was quoted by Associated Press as saying:

"Even with continued improvement we need legislation which will increase the purchasing power of the lower income groups so that farmers, merchants, manufacturers, railroads and investors all may benefit."

Prestige at Stake.

Outcome of the Senate contest was unpredictable. Sponsors of a motion to recommit last night were claiming 38 votes "certain" and a half dozen others uncertain with favorable sentiment "growing." Majority Leader Barkley, and Chairman Black, of the labor committee, forecast passage of the bill. Three or four votes may tell the story of victory or defeat.

Adjournment of Congress, and the Administration's prestige — already seriously damaged by court bill defeat—were as much at stake in the vote as the controversial wages and hours issue. Administration leaders are claiming Congress can conclude its work, without sacrificing major measures, by August 15 to 25. Recommitment of the bill might cut short the session in a few days.

The tide of battle rolled back and forth all day yesterday, with the Senate enacting some amendments, only to reverse the vote later. By a voice vote, the Senate adopted one amendment by Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, to exempt from the legislation firms employing ten persons or less.

Reynolds Provisos Rejected.

Following an appeal by Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, the Senate reconsidered, then defeated the Reynolds amendment, by a 31-to-52 vote. Walsh had warned the amendment would lead "every sweat shop operator to split his establishment up into a host of small shops, each employing only nine or ten men."

Another Reynolds amendment was rejected by a tie 40-to-40 vote. It would have exempted tobacco and cotton warehouses, cotton gins and compresses, and similar industries on a seasonal basis.

A half-dozen amendments were adopted by voice votes. One by Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, would strike a State wage average to become the State minimum WPA wage. Another by Senator McGill, of Kansas, exempted persons delivering farm products to markets. Another by Senator Moore, of New Jersey, exempted employes on motor vehicles and airways. Amendments by Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, to compel consideration of freight rates and local economic conditions in fixing minimum wages were adopted without record vote.

The fire of Southern opposition oratory, touched off Thursday by Senator George, of Georgia, flared into an emotional blaze yesterday and Senators Harrison and Smith branded the measure as discriminatory against the South, and injurious to business and farming alike.

Attacks Business Burden.

Harrison said "it is a wonderful thing to give good wages."

"Yes," said the man who missed being Administration Senate leader by only one vote, "but do not let us try to strike down business that is trying to get along and survive in order to pay such wages.

"We have just passed the social security act. What does it do? It lays a tax on employers, does it not, in order to help the unemployed and to provide old-age benefits.

"Business can stand so much; it cannot stand any more, and for one I am not for destroying any legitimate industry in this country, large or small, and I am not going to vote for any measure here which I think threatens the very economic life of my section as well as other sections of the country."

Harrison said that "if there ever was a time when those in high places should keep their feet on the ground it is now, when they should not be following strange theorists into strange byways."

Strikes at Miss Perkins.

"I suspect that the President never read this measure in his life," he went on. "Madame Perkins may have read it—I do not know. I know if the measure is passed, Madame Perkins is going to have a good deal of say in its administration.

"And, to be perfectly frank, because I would not withhold anything from my colleagues, that is one among other reasons that I am not for this legislation."

Harrison said he would not support a measure vesting responsibility in persons "who have an antipathy against my section, who have an idea that our women wear no shoes, and who have various impressions about my people which are not true, and whose assertions in those respects are unfounded."

In closing, Harrison declared he had "said perhaps more than I should have said," but he added:

"There are more possibilities in this bill for injury and danger to the economic structure of every part of this country than in any piece of proposed legislation that has come before the Congress."

"God's Gifts to South."

Senator Smith struck out flatly with the charge that the wages and hours bill was designed "to overcome the splendid gifts of God to the South. There is not a man here but who knows that that is the object of this bill."

Smith said the object of the bill was to check the rise of the South from the reconstruction depths to which it fell after the Civil War.

"If South Carolina living conditions are so kindly that it takes only 50 cents a day to live comfortably," said the South Carolinian, "and in New England it takes a dollar and a half, then must we raise the wages in the South to a dollar and a half?

"Why don't we call in God and tell Him to stop this business of giving one section more natural advantages than another?"

Assails Administration.

Smith said the South ever since the Civil War had "fondly" hoped for an Administration that would understand Southern conditions, and again hoped it in 1933.

Instead, he said the Democratic two-thirds rule—"the only guarantee of a voice in nominating our standard bearer"—was abolished at the last Democratic convention.

In addition, he said, "for miserable political reasons" the anti-lynching bill has been repeatedly offered.

"Antilynching," he shouted, "two-thirds rule, and last of all this unconscionable—I shall not attempt to use the proper adjective to designate my opinion of this bill." He said "you may be able to force this thing on the South, but a false principle wrought into real life will work itself out in disaster."

In the House, a group of liberals of all parties held a mass meeting. Claiming 80 votes, they agreed to fight adjournment until wages and hours, farm, housing and tax loophole legislation is enacted.

Lieut. Gov. Walter Woodul, of Texas, who accompanied Mattern to the conference, said yesterday his State was "highly gratified" by the decision, which was reached after representatives of the Bureau of Air Commerce, the Army, Navy and Weather Bureau had been named to investigate the scientific gains which would result from the flight.

Officials announced a few days ago that Mattern's application had been tentatively denied but indicated reconsideration would be forthcoming when the famous flyer showed that his proposed trip would have scientific value.

The decision requiring further preparation is in line with the recently announced policy of the Commerce Department declaring that air commerce has reached the point where further advance can be made only through careful scientific preparation, and not by "stunt" flights.

The stringent regulation of so-called experimental flights has been adopted as a partial result of the disappearance of Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, on an equatorial world-girdling flight. Officials indicated yesterday, however, that the new policy had been under consideration long before Miss Earhart took off. The permit for her flight, they said, was granted over a year ago.

Cabinet Bloc Wins Apparent Sugar Victory

Lobbyists from the producers and refiners of the beet-sugar States and the cane-sugar States, lobbyists from the seacoast States where only refiners are affected, lobbyists from each of the three Cabinet departments, lobbyists from other interests affected by the bill, and finally the White House "contact men," all are vitally interested in the measure. The group adds up to one of the most powerful influences ever yet operating to confuse, persuade and wheedle Congressmen whose votes are important.

The President has taken the position, it is understood, that he must veto the present bill, or a bill in the present form, if it gets through the Rules Committee and is passed, in order not to seem to be working against the Cabinet members, his official family. Actually, he is believed to be neutral. At least that is what the members of the Congressional sugar bloc who saw him Thursday state.

But the sugar bloc believes it not only has enough votes to compel Congress to stay this session until the bill has passed, but that it can keep Congress here long enough to pass the bill over the President's veto. Members from 24 States are unofficially pledged to pass the bill.

The legions of sugar lobbyists from all sides, however, are readying themselves for the home-stretch struggle in the marathon race. Congressional lobbies fairly seethe with sugar men, and it is understood no Congressman whose vote counts need be without a dinner invitation these evenings.

Those who conferred yesterday at the Interior Department included Secretaries Hull and Ickes, Acting Secretary of Agriculture M. L. Wilson, Dr. Joshua Bernhardt, of the AAA sugar section; E. K. Burlew, administrative assistant to Ickes; Dr. Ernest Gruening, of the Interior's territories section, and six Democratic Congressmen — Senators Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Wyoming; Alva C. Adams, Colorado, and Prentiss Brown, Michigan, and Representatives Marvin Jones, Texas; Fred Cummings, Colorado, and J. Will Robinson, Utah.

Sheriff Swoons as 2 Die in Gas Chamber

Raleigh, N. C., July 30 (AP).—A sheriff fainted today while witnessing the asphyxiating of two men in the State's gas chamber.

After Thomas Perry, 23-year-old colored man, had been killed for assaulting a colored woman, Sheriff Ray Hoover, of Concord, collapsed in the witness room amid the gassing of A. W. Watson, 21, of Athens, Ga., convicted of murdering a filling station attendant.

Catholic Hospital Seized.

Coblenz, Germany, July 30 (AP).—A Catholic hospital at Waldbreitbach, from which all patients were removed by the government because of what it called immoral conditions, today became state property. The institution was declared bankrupt and was purchased by the state for an undisclosed price. Officials said it would reopen as a Nazi institution.

Thrilled Three Continents.

New York, July 30 (AP).—Alfredo Codona, only circus aerialist ever to perform a triple somersault, was described today by friends and fellow-troupers as the "Nijinsky of the flying rings."

Codona was born in Mexico 44 years ago and, with his brother, Joe, held circus audiences of three continents breathless as the "Flying Codonas" went through their daring routines high above the heads of gaping multitudes.

The aerialist's first wife was Lillian Leitzel, famed aerial gymnast, who was killed in Copenhagen in February, 1931, when an iron ring snapped during her act. Their romance was "a true love match of the sawdust circle," said Dexter Fellows, circus press agent.

Following Miss Leitzel's death, Codona married Vera Bruce, an Australian aerialist, who took his first wife's place in the act. They were married at San Antonio, Tex., September 16, 1932.

Before their separation, Codona and his second wife lived in Long Beach, Calif., while he worked in a garage. Since then she has lived with her mother in Long Beach and he with relatives at Walteria, Calif.

Margin Provisions Revised for Banks

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board amended regulations yesterday to broaden the scope of present margin requirements as they apply to banks.

Under existing regulations, persons buying securities on margin must put up 55 per cent of the price in cash and may borrow up to 45 per cent. This rule applies to all loans advanced since May 1, 1936.

Under the amended regulations, effective September 1, the Reserve Board prohibits the withdrawal or substitution of collateral behind loans made prior to May 1, 1936, if such action gives the borrower a loan amounting to more than 45 per cent of the value of his securities.

If the loan was in excess of 45 per cent of the securities' value on May 1, 1936, the regulations prevent withdrawal or substitution of any collateral which would increase the excess. They do not require, however, that the loan be reduced, or that additional collateral be provided.

Dog Will Face Trial Today in Fight for Life

Skowhegan, Me., July 30 (AP).—A bite which June, 4-year-old police dog, allegedly inflicted on a Skowhegan man formed the basis today of a complaint placing the animal on trial for life in the Western Somerset municipal court. The charge will be heard tomorrow by Judge Maurice P. Merrill.

Harry A. Dinsmore, insurance man, charged the dog bit him July 21, accused the animal of being "dangerous and vicious," and summoned the owner, Mrs. Hattie Perkins, to show cause why her pet should not be killed. Mrs. Perkins charged Dinsmore with striking the dog with his cane, after she had previously warned him not to do so.

strengthened intangible personal property tax, but Auditor Donovan yesterday gave an estimate of only $250,000 explaining that the other $250,000 had been anticipated in calculating the $7,000,000 deficit.

It was disclosed yesterday that the conferees had slashed the authorization for a tax study by the Commissioners from the $20,000 voted by the Senate to $5,000. The Commissioners originally has asked for $50,000.

All references to "expert" aids were stricken from the provision, and the authorization merely gave the District heads the right to employ clerical workers. No mention is made of Civil Service qualifications.

The tax study will be made this fall, as the report must be submitted to Congress not later than January 15.

Crisis Averted.

The Commissioners will include this $5,000 in their estimates for administering the new tax laws.

Inclusion of the emergency loan authorization will forestall any fiscal crisis in the District government. As the bill allows the District heads to extend the payment of the $1.75 realty and personal property tax for as much as six days from September, even the District's customary early fall income will be far below that of previous years.

Among new provisions in the conference bill are specifications that gross receipts of stock and bond brokers be considered as the gross amount of their commissions and that the gross receipts of building contractors be deemed their income after paying subcontractors and buying materials.

Another paragraph empowers the Commissioners to draft whatever rules and regulations are necessary to make the taxes operative.

A suggestion that when new tax problems arise, a joint committee be appointed to study them, was put forward in a letter yesterday from citizens who served on a special body to study tax delinquencies.

Two Held in Feud In'Haunted Corral'

Florence, Ariz., July 30 (AP).—The bloody "Haunted Corral" feud, patterned along lines of the Old West, brought two arrests today.

After a week of tramping over wild hinterland near Arivaipa Canyon, Sheriff Walter Laveen said he had arrested Bill Wheeler and Joe Towner.

They are charged with attempted murder of A. B. (Doc.) Deaver, State cattle sanitary inspector. He was shot July 22 as he rode along a precipitous canyon trail.

Undersheriff W. W. Cochran linked the attempt on Deaver's life with the killing of Henry Towner, another rancher, and brother of Joe, in Arivaipa Canyon, seven weeks ago in what he said was a ranch feud.

Delegates Chosen For Paris Session

The State Department announced yesterday the United States would participate in the second International Congress of Esthetics and the Science of Art to be held in Paris, France, August 8 to 11.

The American delegation will be: Dr. Royal B. Birth on Wheels Legal; Toil on Trailer Useless

Des Moines, Ia., July 30 (AP).—Doctors discovered today the foundation they hurriedly built under the Charles Tharp trailer just before little Wanda Mae Thrap was born Tuesday, was wasted effort.

The doctors said they recalled an Iowa law which they believed prohibited the birth of children in anything but permanent buildings. Hastily they jacked up the trailer and put a foundation under it—and just in time. But today city and State authorities declared no such law existed, and birth of a child "on wheels" was perfectly legal.

Radio Artists to Form New Labor Organization

New York, July 30 (AP).—The Actors Equity Association relinquished its jurisdiction over the radio field today and steps were taken immediately to establish the new American Federation of Radio Artists as a unit of the Associated Actors and Artists of America.

With minor reservations, the equity council approved the proposed constitution of the federation and the International Board of the Associated Actors and Artists agreed to charter the new unit when it becomes sufficiently organized.

U. S. Will Open Inquiry on Bay Steamer Fire

Alcohol and Sugar in Hold; Two Still Missing; Crew Praised.

They should be highly commended because the fire had the makings of a disaster of major proportions."

The three-man board of inquiry, appointed by Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, whose department embraces the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, is made up of J. Frank Staley, of the Department of Justice, an expert on admiralty law; Commander H. N. Perham, of the United States Coast Guard, and Eugene C. Carlson, supervising inspector of the Marine Inspection and Navigation Bureau.

Dead Missing Listed.

The dead in the ship fire were:

J. R. Polikoff, a lawyer of Aiken, S. C.

The missing:

H. Paige, a passenger, address unknown.

Cy Haynie, an oiler.

On orders of President Roosevelt, two patrol planes and one observation plane took off from Annapolis at daybreak and searched miles of Chesapeake Bay, looking for bodies or possible survivors.

A Navy tug, six motor launches, a "crash" boat, a fire boat and three patrol boats went to the scene of the disaster.

Pathetic Aftermath.

A pathetic aftermath of the fire was recorded at Bayside Beach, of which the derelict lay, as children patrolled the beach in search of an Irish setter.

The dog belonged to Miss Betty Ramsay, 25, of Baltimore, a passenger on the City of Baltimore. Cut off from the lifeboats, she clung to the ship to the last minute, hugging the setter. Finally, when the flames had scorched her legs, she threw the animal overboard and jumped after him. Once in the water, however, she and the dog became separated.

Picked up by W. H. Sands, a summer colonist at Bayside Beach, who had gone out in a surf boat, Miss Ramsay pleaded that a search be made for her dog. In her anxiety, she appeared oblivious to the burns on her legs.

Reaching shore, she offered a $50 reward for return of her pet. Today she was in a Baltimore Hospital, brought here by a Revere Beach ambulance.

Hat Attracts Rescuers.

All last night and early this morning the children of Bayside Beach walked up and down the shore line, hoping that the setter would swim in.

Against the background of horror was at least one amusing story. It concerned John H. Bing, a B. & O. Railroad worker, who was one of the passengers forced by the flames to the bow of the ship, away from the lifeboats. Bing, along with others, jumped into the water, and in doing so held on to his straw hat.

It was the straw hat, bobbing in the black waters, that attracted rescuers to him. He still had the hat pulled down on his head when he left Bayside for Baltimore.

Rams Rescue Ship.

Norfolk, Va., July 30 (AP).—Capt. Paul Jones, of the American-Hawaiian Line steamer Arkansan, risked the safety of his own ship in rendering assistance to the ill-fated Chesapeake Steampship Co.'s City of Baltimore.

The Arkansan, first to reach the burning ship, rescued five survivors in its own lifeboat, but not until she had been rammed almost amidship on her port side by the City of Baltimore.

The Arkansan arrived here today with several plates on her port side damaged.

Still Under Way.

Captain Jones made a report of the collision at the office of Eugene Carlson, supervising inspector of steamboats for this district, today soon after his ship had docked.

"We were only about 1,500 feet behind the City of Baltimore when we saw her burst into flames," said Captain Jones.

"We went to her with all speed and in six minutes we had our boat overboard and were picking up survivors. The rescue work was handicapped to some extent by the City of Baltimore herself. She was still under way while she was a mass of flames. We tried to keep our ship from striking her and at the same time do what we could to rescue her passengers."

people see the light. If they do, it will be to their own interests."

Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, yesterday introduced a bill to enable owners of river, bay and lake steamers to obtain Government-insured mortgages for the reconditioning of their vessels.

Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, hurriedly offered a bill which he had been drafting and issued a statement explaining that its enactment might prevent recurrence of such disasters.

Cochran said that he understood that the Maritime Commission had decided to lend no aid in the construction or reconditioning of vessels on rivers, lakes, sounds or bays, or in the coast trade.

"My bill creates a setup similar to the one in the Federal Housing Administration," he said, "but insures the mortgages up to 75 per cent rather than 80 per cent."

"We have spent billions of dollars making our rivers, lakes, and bays fit for navigation purposes, but owing to the fact that money has not been available they have not been used as we had expected.

"The disaster Thursday night just below Baltimore indicates to me that ships are needed that will insure our people against fire. Our floating equipment that this bill would help is to a great extent obsolete.

"This bill will cost the Government no money because the mortgages will be taken over by the insurance companies and others the same as the housing mortgages are being bought as soon as issued."

Premier Prepares To Quit Following Yugoslavian Riots

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, July 30 (U.P.). Premier Milan Stoyadinovitch, key man of Yugoslavia in the nation's gravest crisis since the assassination of King Alexander, left for Brod tonight, reportedly to offer his resignation to Prince Regent Paul.

The move presumably resulted from yesterday's widespread riots and terrorism which swept Yugoslavia while the body of Patriarch Varnave, head of the Greek Catholic Church, was being carried to the grave.

One woman was killed and hundreds were injured in bloody fighting among police, Greek and Roman Catholics. Shouts of "down with Stoyadinovitch" were heard in the streets. The Greek Catholic Church opposed the concordat with the Vatican which the Premier had demanded and excommunicated every member of the government who supported it.

Man Sleeps On As Truck Breaks His Wooden Leg

Homer Wills, of 318 Third street northwest, awoke from an afternoon siesta in an alley in the rear of The Post Building yesterday afternoon, and discovered that a heavy truck had run over one of his legs while he reposed in the arms of Morpheus. The leg was broken off and the truck gone before he awoke and became aware of the tragedy.

Incidentally, it was Wills' left leg that was run over—the one he made himself back in 1935. Wills, who sells newspapers when he's not asleep, said he had felt "a little sleepy" and decided to catch a few winks before peddling his papers.

Seating himself in a doorway in the alley, he inadvertently poked his wooden leg into the driveway and failed to wake up when the wheels of the truck passed over.

Battle Raging After Granada Troops Revolt

Disease Plot Charged.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, July 30 (AP).—Two Frenchmen were condemned to death today for what insurgent Spanish officials charged was a macabre plot to infest their territory with typhoid and sleeping sickness epidemics.

They said the whole world would be called to witness the truth of their allegations that Louis Chabrat and Jean Boujennec were tools of an international ring that involved Englishmen, Frenchmen, and some Spaniards in high government offices.

For that reason the insurgents said they would delay execution of sentence and give information of the supposed plan to the League of Nations and all world capitals.

French officials declared the charges were "ridiculous" propaganda. A member of the French Chamber of Deputies, whose name was similar to one announced by the insurgents as a conspirator, declared he had never heard of the condemned men and that the insurgents were a "pack of liars."

An insurgent military court declared the scheme was hatched in London and that Chabrat and Boujennec possessed vials of typhoid and sleeping sickness germs when they were arrested in Fuentarabia.

It accused them of smuggling the germs across the French border and of engaging in espionage. The two Frenchmen were said to have received 100,000 francs (about $3,750) each for their part in the alleged plot.

Both sides on the Brunete front, west of Madrid, buried their dead, apparently content to leave their lines temporarily where they are in a broiling summer heat.

An insurgent dispatch declared government forces were persisting in an offensive against Castro-Alen, a tall mountain controlling plans on the northern Santander front, despite several futile charges and heavy casualties.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco's troops on the Cuenca front in eastern Spain, striving to knife the Madrid-Valencia highway, were bolstered by air-bombing operations. They reported only mopping-up operations in the rugged mountains between Albarracin and the Cuenca province border, however.

Prison 'Sit-up' Striker Takes to Tower Again

San Rafael, Calif., July 30 (AP).—Meyer Golas, 32, San Quentin Prison's polelclimbing "sit-up" striker, was in the air again today.

Cold and hunger forced the Los Angeles burglar down Tuesday after he perched 19 hours on an 85-foot tower and flag pole to enforce his demand that he be sent to "the island." Prison officials said they did not know what place he meant. Today he broke away from a marching line and scaled another tower. Warden Court Smith said he would make no immediate effort to coax him down.

Russia Started War in Spain, Berlin Charges

Von Ribbentrop Formally Insists Moscow Seeks Red Regime.

By the United Press.

London, July 30.—Germany today formally charged Soviet Russia with starting the Spanish civil war in an effort to establish a Bolshevik regime and with shattering international efforts to preserve the non-intervention project.

The charge was made by Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Ambassador to London, before a "showdown" session of the chairman's sub-committee of the non-intervention body that has pledged 27 European nations to a "hands off Spain" policy.

"Soviet Russia started the Spanish civil war and would like to end it in her own way, that is, by bolshevising Spain," Von Ribbentrop said angrily.

The attack on Germany's most bitter European enemy sprung from Russia's announcement that she will not consider, under any circumstances, the granting of belligerent rights to the Spanish insurgents.

Ivan Maisky, Russian representative, retorting to Von Ribbentrop, said:

"Don't try to shift the blame from those who are guilty to those who are not. The world public opinion can easily detect the truth.

Germany, Italy Assailed.

"If non-intervention breaks down it will be Germany's and Italy's responsibility, not ours, for the real danger comes not from the Soviet, which opposes the granting of belligerent rights, but from Germany and Italy who strenuously oppose the withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain."

The Soviet stand, virtually wrecking British efforts to salvage non-intervention collaboration, was made in reply to a British proposal that belligerent rights be granted to both the insurgents and loyalists, dependent on withdrawal of all foreign volunteers from Spain.

"Only one government, namely Soviet Russia, has wrecked this British plan by rejecting one of its three fundamental principles," Von Ribbentrop said. "This irrefutable statement must now be made. The grave responsibility rests on Soviet Russia alone."

During the angry charges another dramatic scene was occurring a few blocks down Whitehall in the House of Commons where David Lloyd George, wartime prime minister, charged that the foreign policies of Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and his predecessors were driving Europe toward war.

Nazi Refusal Made.

Von Ribbentrop told the neutrality sub-committee that, as result of Russia's defiance, Germany refuses to enter into discussion of the British plan that provides, in addition to withdrawal of volunteers and belligerent rights, for neutral control agents in all Spanish ports.

The sub-committee adjourned at 7:15 p. m. in what seemed a hopeless deadlock after Maisky, in a lengthy speech, angrily denied Germany's charges and defended Russia's refusal to grant belligerent rights to Gen. Francisco Franco's Spanish nationalists.

The charges of Lloyd George, opposition Liberal leader, were made during a "full dress" debate, after which Commons adjourned for the summer recess.

Lloyd George's angeF was aroused by Eden's statement that the British policy of non-intervention in regard to the Spanish conflict had served to avert a general war in Europe.

"The worst way of insuring peace is for a great country like this to give the impression that whatever happens or does not happen, whatever other countries do or refuse to do, there is no point at which we will make a firm stand," Lloyd George said.

Germany Sends More Warships.

Berlin, July 30 (U.P.).—Germany, foreseeing complete collapse of the non-intervention scheme, tonight sent additional warships into Spanish waters to "protect German interests." The official Nazi News Agency, DNB, announced that the cruisers Admiral Scheer and Koeln are accompanying the second torpedo boat flotilla down the Spanish coast.

War Anniversary Rallies Germans

Berlin, July 30 (AP).—German veterans of the World War were preparing tonight to observe the twenty-third anniversary of the war's outbreak Sunday with a "mobilization for peace."

One hundred thousand were expected to gather in the Olympic Stadium. The first of 59 special trains bringing "front fighters" from all parts of Germany already were arriving.

Guest delegations were expected from a dozen foreign countries. Marshal Werner von Blomberg, minister of war, and Gen. Baron Werner von Fristch, commander in chief of the army, are to attend. It was August 1, 1914, that Germany and Russia went to war.

1,252 Autoists Lose Licenses Here in 2 Years

90% Were Suspended Under Safety Act for Drunken Driving.

Since the D. C. safety responsibility law was put into operation two years ago, 1,252 automobile driving permits have been suspended, the A. A. A. District of Columbia Motor Club announced yesterday.

The law, which requires suspension of driving privileges of motorists convicted of serious offenses or who fail to satisfy a judgment, has been particularly effective in dealing with drunken drivers, the statement said, 90 per cent of the suspensions being for driving under the influence of liquor. Driving privileges have been restored in 281 cases, only after the offender filed proof of his financial responsibility.

Twenty-eight States now have a similar law. The principal purpose, is to bar reckless and financially irresponsible motorists from the highways.

To offset a new racket by which unsuccessful applicants for driving permits can obtain permits by paying fees to a ring of experienced drivers, who guarantee the issuance of permits, Traffic Director William Van Duzer suggested that pictures of the applicants be required with applications.

The present application requires only a general description of the person, and it has been a simple matter for the offenders to impersonate the applicant and take the tests.

In the last three days six persons have been convicted of obtaining permits through misrepresentation. Three of them, James Snowden, Lewis J. Greasey and Robert Woddy, were fined $25 each by Traffic Judge John P. McMahon.

Arkansas Seeking Cheap TVA Power

Knoxville, Tenn., July 30 (U.P.).—Expansion of the Tennessee Valley Authority into Arkansas moved a step nearer tonight after a conference of TVA officials and the Arkansas Utilities Commission.

Thomas Fitzhugh, chairman of the Arkansas commission, said the chief topic was the co-operative movement to provide cheap power to 6,000 families in rural communities in northeast Arkansas.

"We are particularly interested in the establishment of rural co-operatives," Fitzhugh said. "But our conversation was of a general nature."

The TVA recently signed a contract with the Arkansas Power & Light Co., but it did not provide for "yardstick" power. Fitzhugh said the commission had complete control of power rates in Arkansas and that schedules under the TVA setup would be studied when presented to his group. He said these rates were not discussed at today's conference.

U.S. Loan Board May Take Over Fidelity Bank

Shareholders' Committee Head Hints Possible Action After Conference.

A prediction that the Federal Home Loan Bank Board will take over the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association was made by Mrs. Mark C. Bullis, chairman of the shareholders committee, after a conference with the comptroller of the currency yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Bullis issued the following statement:

"I met with W. T. Webb, vice chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, yesterday morning, and with the Comptroller of the Currency in the afternoon, and I can truthfully say that everything is going to be all right. I am of the opinion that the board is going to take over our institution."

Favors Reorganization.

The shareholders committee, which has been negotiating with the board and the Comptroller of the Currency since July 18, 1936, when the bank closed its doors, have attempted to release the funds of the more than 16,000 investors.

Mrs. Bullis said that she favored the proposed First Federal Savings & Loan Association to take over the Fidelity with the assurance that the shareholders will receive 85 cents on the dollar. However, the situation remained static when Harry P. Somerville announced that he stood on his recent decision to withdraw the First Federal from the scene. Officially, therefore, the First Federal has no proposal before the Federal Loan Bank Board, which sponsored the organization, or the Comptroller of the Currency, who is in charge of the closed Fidelity.

Visions Success.

The conference, which was held at the Comptroller of the Currency's office in the Treasury Department yesterday, was "strictly confidential," but Mrs. Bullis is determined that the new movement of the shareholders will meet with success on this venture.

The Treasury Department has under consideration a letter to be sent to all shareholders explaining the present situation of the Fidelity. This letter, if there is no further change in the arrangements, will be completed and mailed.

Homeless Cats' Friend.

London, July 30 (U.P.).—The Hon. Mrs. Helen Charlton today canceled her vacation in order that she might make nightly tours of London's fashionable West End, feeding pate de foie gras, minced salmon and milk to stray cats. "That's the only way to be sure the cats are fed," Mrs. Charlton said, explaining that it was "useless" to donate to charities.

D. C. Woman Tells Grand Jurors of $6,000 Gem Theft

Boston, Mass., July 30 (A.P.).—Mrs. Elizabeth J. Williams, pretty, 25-year-old Washington woman, went before the Suffolk County grand jury today to tell of her experiences at the hands of four men who robbed her of $6,000 worth of jewelry in a Back Bay hotel room.

Her head and one arm were still in bandages and she was attended by a nurse. She had gone to the hotel room with a man who had introduced himself as an old friend, when three men entered the room, grabbed her and tore her jewelry from her. One arm was broken.

Later the four men were caught in New York attempting a similar holdup and Mrs. Williams went to New York and identified them.

Deford Rejects Closed Shop At Luray Plant

Tannery Official Is Firm in Refusing to Sign Union Pact.

Luray, Va., July 30 (A.P.).—Thomas Deford, vice president of the strike-closed Deford Tannery, said today the company would not sign any agreement providing for a closed shop or that would lead to a closed shop.

"We have a large number of old employes, to whom we owe a great debt of gratitude and we intend to provide work for these men if they want it, whether they desire to belong to the union or not," Deford said.

"A signed agreement would eventually lead to a closed shop and be the entering wedge for union discrimination against nonunion members," he continued, and added: "This we positively will not be a party to."

He asserted the company would live up to its verbal promises to the union. He said he could not understand "the determination of the union to insist on a signed agreement when the company has always been known to live up to its promises."

The Tannery was closed June 28. Deford announced it would reopen Monday, August 2, that he expected a large number of employes to return to work and that no discrimination would be made against union members.

"We are not in a position to sign an agreement on the subject of a wage increase on January 1," Deford said. "We simply promised that if our business was profitable in the course of the next few months and justified a raise in wages at that time, we would gladly and voluntarily raise pay to the practical limit."

Posses Hunt Girl, 13, Feared Kidnaped, Slain

Man, 26, Is Accused of Luring Child From Her Nevada Home.

By the United Press.

Tonopah, Nev., July 30.—The father of pretty 13-year-old Olive Carr swore out a kidnaping warrant today against Earl Wilson, 26, who, police charged, lured the girl away from home with promises of riches in California.

Police said Wilson left a note for the girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Carr, which read:

"You will never take me alive."

Authorities of four States joined in the search, and the Federal Department of Justice was reported to be interested in the case.

Carr expressed fear that his daughter had been killed and left in the vast desert surrounding Tonopah.

According to police, Wilson told the girl he had a ranch and a $15,000 bank account in California. Sheriff W. A. Thomas said Wilson aparently had taken $46 from the cash register in Carr's downtown store before he left town.

The sheriff organized posses to search the desert roads in the Tonopah area and asked authorities throughout Nevada and in Utah, California and Arizona to watch all highways.

The only clew was a report that a man and a girl resembling the pair had been seen attempting to get a ride on a highway leading south to Las Vegas.

Cumberland's Picketing Law Is Called Illegal

Circuit Court Reserves Decision After Hearing.

Cumberland, Md., July 30 (A.P.).—This city's picket-control ordinance was attacked as unconstitutional and defended as necessary in hearings today before Chief Judge Lindley D. Sloan of the circuit court.

Judge Sloan said he would file a written decision in the case within a few days.

The recently-adopted ordinance was brought to the court on an appeal. William N. Norris appealed his conviction under the statute through a writ of habeas corpus and Harry C. Nield, also convicted in a lower court, filed a petition for a writ of certiorari.

The double appeal was filed to make sure the higher court considered the ordinance.

George Henderson, former mayor and attorney for the appellants, argue the ordinance violated the State and Federal constitutions. He said the provision limiting the number of pickets to six was arbitrary; that the provision requiring a written application for a permit to picket was discriminatory; and that the State act permitting picketing was superior to the city ordinance.

Henderson contended the ordinance was enacted "to prevent future strikes and break present ones." He also charged it gave too much power to the chief of police, who is authorized to issue permits to the pickets.

Charles Z. Heskett, city attorney, said the ordinance was valid because it conferred a legal right to picket. He said the courts have recognized the right of municipal authorities to regulate picketing under police regulations and said the presence of large numbers of pickets leads to riot, assault and disorder.

Asserting that the city authorities are given power to preserve the public peace, Heskett said mass picketing led to "mob thinking and mob psychology and that it is better to regulate picketing."

Fall Trade Gains Predicted by A.F.L.

By the Associated Press.

Trade will reach a "highly satisfactory level" in the last three months of the year, the American Federation of Labor predicted yesterday.

"We are now in the dullest period of the year," the federation said in its monthly business survey.

"Business is expected to improve."

Large gains in union membership last spring, the federation said, had been of great benefit to business and had done much to check "excesses which were paving the way for another depression."

Wage increases and cuts in working hours due to unionization, the federation said, had increased purchasing power 7.5 per cent so far this year.

2 Governors Join Tall Corn Contest

Des Moines, Iowa, July 30 (A.P.).—The Governors of Iowa and Wisconsin will come to grips, good naturedly, at noon tomorrow in a tall-corn matching contest which has the partisans of each State in something of a dither.

The Badger executive, Philip La Follette, had transported into Iowa last night specimens of Wisconsin's towering corn to deposit elaborately in the front yard of his host, Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel.

Gov. Kraschel, expressing faith in Iowa corn traditions, recently offered to wager a dinner with his neighbor to the northeast that Iowa could produce a corn stalk 2 feet taller than Wisconsin's best. Gov. La Follette readily called it a date.

Earhart Search Fliers Braved Ice, Lightning, Report Reveals

Storm on Attempted Honolulu-Howland Plane Trip Described; Snow, Sleet, Rain Forced Ship Back From Errand.

How Navy fliers braved snow, ice and lightning in the search for Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, is described in a report filed by Capt. Kenneth Whiting, U. S. N., commander of the aircraft squadrons at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

The report tells how a long-range patrol plane commanded by Lieut. W. W. Harvey, U. S. N., was dispatched from Honolulu to get accurate information for a flight to rescue the two fliers. Harvey was ordered to risk possible damage to the plane in landing and taking off at Howland Island in order to refuel with gasoline left there for Miss Earhart. That gasoline would have been just enough to get the plane back to Honolulu.

Capt. Whiting's report then continues:

"The trip progressed very nicely, the night being clear for the start and continuing so until the morning hours. At 2:40 a. m. the plane passed directly over the U. S. S. Swan (aircraft tender on station for the Earhart flight) on course to Howland and a little over half way there.

"Shortly afterward, lightning began to appear in the south and southeast. About 5:15 a. m. we began passing through clouds at regular intervals all the way up to 12,000 feet. The electrical display got worse and we discontinued use of radio because of electrical discharges every time the transmitter was used. Ice began to form on the plane and even on the windshield about one-fourth inch of ice was formed. It apparently formed in large enough pieces to break and be thrown against the fuselage by the propeller for the distinct sounds were noted. The automatic pilot became sluggish due to iced controls and at this time a descent was started, hoping to get under the storm. During the descent sleet was noted from 12,000 to 10,000 feet, snow down to about 4,000 and violent rain continued to the surface. The air bumps were of considerable violence. After about two hours of this, and continuously trying to find a way around, the flight was turned back."

DuPont Ruled $28,787 Short in '30 Income Tax

By the Associated Press.

The Board of Tax Appeals yesterday determined Lammot du Pont, Wilmington, Del., was $28,787 deficient in 1930 income taxes. It absolved du Pont of a $28,579 deficiency in 1931 income taxes assessed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The bureau had assessed du Pont $99,945 for 1930.

Du Pont had contended the bureau erred in disallowing $382,727 deducted as losses on sales of securities to the Saint Aour Co. in 1930 and $504,640 deducted as a loss on the liquidation of the company in 1931.

Case Reopening Asked.

A group identifying itself as a protective committee petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to reopen reorganization proceedings of the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co. The committee said it was acting for holders of Stephenville, North and South Texas Railway first mortgage bonds, and Central Arkansas and Eastern Railroad Co. first mortgage bonds.

Explanation Asked In WPA Layoffs

The WPA United Federal Workers local union yesterday requested Attorney General Cummings to issue an immediate interpretation of the provisions of the relief bill dealing with layoff of employes on the basis of State quotas.

In a letter to Cummings, signed by Arthur Stein, president of the union, it was stated that David Niles, WPA assistant administrator and Florence Kelly, director of personnel, had taken into account only WPA employes in determining which States were over or under their quotas.

Contending the whole of the Federal service should be considered before making a determination of a State's quota, Stein requested clarification of several provisions of section 7, title 1, of the bill.

Md. Soldiers To End Camp Training Today

By Phillip J. Austensen.
A Staff Correspondent.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md., July 30.—Congratulations and thanks for their splendid effort during the two-week training encampment which ends tomorrow were tendered members of the First Infantry, Maryland National Guard, at retreat tonight by Lieut. Col. Elmer Munshower, commanding.

Col. Munshower, executive officer of the regiment, had been in command during the encampment due to the absence in Europe of Col. D. John Markey, the commanding officer, who is a member of the Battle Monuments Commission.

Company B, of Hagerstown, commanded by Capt. Carl H. McCleary, was presented with a silver loving cup for the best armory attendance during the year. The company has won the cup for six years in succession.

Company C, of Cambridge, which wrested the best Federal inspection trophy from the Service Company, of Silver Spring, for the first time since its first award seven years ago, received the cup from Col. Munshower. Service Company was second this year, by a small margin. Company C is commanded by Capt. George D. Todd.

The regiment staged a sham battle this morning near Harbaugh's Church. While cattle and horses grazed in No Man's Land, two battalions of the regiment attacked a strong position held by the other battalion. The battle marked the last training activity of the regiment in camp.

The units of the First will begin their trip home in the morning. Company D, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, and the Service Company will have charge of the movement home. Units which come from a long distance will be moved by train and the others by truck.

The camp has been one of the most pleasant in the history of the regiment. Sick call has brought forth few patients and there have been no serious injuries or illnesses.

Regular Army instructors to the Maryland National Guard entertained Maj. William Tydings, who finishes his tour of duty with Maryland National Guard tomorrow and returns to his regiment in the Presidio, California, tonight.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Proper Timing.

The trickiest thing, by far, in the play of a bridge hand is timing. A declarer may guess every finesse and find perfect breaks in vital suits, but if each play is not made at precisely the right time, the result is not apt to be a happy one. The following hand occurred in a recent Crockford Club's duplicate, and only one declarer got the maximum number of tricks.

East, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

	♠ 10 5 ♡ 8 6 4 ◇ A Q J 8 4 3 ♣ A 10
♠ 7 6 ♡ A Q 9 3 ◇ K 10 2 ♣ J 9 5 3	North West East South	♠ K 4 2 ♡ K 5 2 ◇ 9 7 ♣ K Q 6 4 2
	♠ A Q J 9 8 2 ♡ J 10 7 ◇ 6 5 ♣ 8 7

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	1 ♠	2 ♣	2 ◇
Pass	2 ♠	3 ♣	3 ◇
Pass	3 ♠	4 ♣	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

East's orginial bid was pretty skimpy, but several of the players in that position put it in as a sort of semipsychic lead-directing bid. The vulnerability condition, of course, was an influencing factor.

West opened the fourth-best club, and dummy's ace was put up in all cases. Then at all tables except one the ten of spades was led—certainly a persuasive play. East did not cover, and another spade was led and finessed successfully. The spade king was then picked up, and a diamond was led toward dummy. The finesse succeeded, but availed these declarers very little because there was no way of returning to the South hand for another diamond finesse.

On the wild hope that the king would fall, the ace was laid down, but West unkindly refused to part with the king, and these declarers then were forced to concede three heart tricks and a club.

After winning the first trick with dummy's club ace, the pitfall of leading the spade ten and letting it ride should have been quite apparent. It was all right to lead the ten but, with a small card appearing from East, the vital play was to overtake with the Jack and immediately to try a diamond finesse.

The one declarer that launched this attack ended up with no fewer than 13 tricks! The spade Jack held the second trick, and the diamond Jack held the third trick. Another spade finesse followed by the drawing of opponents' last trump and a subsequent diamond finesse brought home the entire diamond suit without loss, providing discards for South's three losing hearts and one losing club.

McCarran Joins U. S. Employes In Wage Fight

Heads of 2 Worker Units Indorse Minimum Pay Measure.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, yesterday lined up with the heads of two Government worker organizations in support of the House minimum wage bill, but the worker union chiefs expressed disappointment on the minimum proposed.

Chairman Bulow of the Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday introduced the companion retirement bill offered Thursday by Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, together with the wage bill.

Meanwhile, Luther Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, and Jacob Baker, head of the United Federal Workers of America, issued statements approving the bills in principle, but urged a $1,500 minimum instead of $1,200 as provided.

The N. F. F. E. "feels definitely that a minimum of $1,200 a year for adult, full-time employes is too low," Steward said. "We feel strongly that that figure represents a point below which the Federal pay scale certainly should not drop."

He called the present pay scales "indefensibly low," and characterized the Ramspeck bill as a step in the right direction. He approved the Ramspeck retirement bill in the main.

Baker contended that Federal salaries are entirely too low, and found encouragement in the "determination of the Congress to seriously consider the whole problem upon its merits." He felt that no position should pay less than $1,500 a year, with all grades scaled upward proportionately.

"When hearings are opened and the facts are shown, there should be no question as to the wholehearted sentiment of members of both the House and Senate favorable to the principles of the bill," Baker said.

Naval Reserve Course Sought For Boys 16-18

Six weeks of summer naval reserve training will be provided for college and high school youths by the Navy, beginning next July, if the funds are made available by Congress.

Young men from 16 to 18 would receive primary training, designed to fit them for possible naval service as enlisted men in the event of war or other national emergency, at the Newport, R. I.; Hampton Roads, Va.; Great Lakes, Ill., and San Diego, Calif., training stations.

Preliminary training of college sophomores and juniors to provide a reservoir of potential naval officers also is being worked out.

After a period at a shore training station, naval officials said yesterday, those students who show interest in naval life and who make good records would be eligible for further training at naval schools or on summer vacation cruises. In time, the Navy Department hopes to build up a large reserve of men who have had sufficient training and sea-going experience to fill vacancies aboard ships of the fleet and its auxiliaries in case of national emergency.

The new training would not interfere with the present setup of the naval reserve, officials said. The units of the naval reserve and the naval R. O. T. C. would keep their present status, at least for the time being. Sufficient funds, it was indicated, are being sought to give reserve officers and men—fleet reserve, volunteer reserve and merchant marine reserve—the required training to perform efficiently if called to active service.

Family Heirlooms Willed to Son; Petition for Probate Filed.

Mrs. Marguerite Colton Hagner, widow of Randall H. Hagner, was named the chief beneficiary of his estate it was shown in District Court yesterday when a petition for the probate of his will was filed. The estate was valued at more than $250,000.

Stating that "I make no further provision herein for my children because I have every confidence in my wife and feel sure that she will do all within her means to provide suitably for their maintenance, education and support" the will mentioned several family heirlooms that were to go to Alexander B. Hagner, a son, with the rest of the estate going to the widow.

Mr. Hagner, who was well known in local real estate and social circles, suggested that his widow leave to their three remaining children, Randall Hagner, jr., Marguerite Colton Hagner and Isabella Louisa Hagner, in equal shares all she has left. He explained that he left no provision for Alexander Hagner because he, the oldest son, was well cared for and was able to provide for himself.

The executors of the estate were Mrs. Hagner, George N. Ray and the Riggs National Bank. Mr. Hagner died in New York Monday.

"They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures." (Psalms 36:08.

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"We shall obey and adore in proportion as we apprehend the divine nature and love Him understandingly, warring no more over the corporeality, but rejoicing in the affluence of our God."

THE SIXTH OF EIGHT REASONS WHY . . .

The Washington Post Grows

THE SPEED of a newspaper's growth is dependent upon its ability to know what its readers want and to give those readers the best of everything that must go into the production of an outstanding publication. Almost every one knows that THE WASHINGTON POST has doubled its circulation in less than four years. This was no accident. The reasons why are interesting. And the purpose of this series of chats with readers is simply to tell how it was done.

NO. 6—COLUMNS

BARTHOLOMEW GREEN'S Boston News-Letter probably printed the first American newspaper "column." In the issue of March 7, 1723, he announced his desire to have "all Ingenious Gentlemen, in every Part of the Country, to communicate the Remarkable Things they observe; and he Desires them to send their Accounts Post-Free and nothing but what they assuredly know and they shall be Received and Published." Such correspondence has its modern counterpart in "Letters to the Editor." Other early "columns" included many similar to those now current. J. R. Drake and F. G. Hallack wrote satirical odes for the New York Evening Post as early as 1819 under the heading of "Croaker & Co." Margaret Fuller and Edgar Allan Poe were writing book reviews for New York papers in 1844. The first newspaper serials . . . "Wooing in the Alps, or How the Colonel Won His Bride" was one popular title . . . appeared before the Civil War. "Our New York Letter," described as "a summary of everything that is calculated to interest and entertain," made its debut in newspapers published outside of the great city in 1875, a forerunner of the many Broadway gossip columns of the present day. Before the turn of the century, such names as Rudyard Kipling, Jack London, Arthur Conan Doyle and Robert Louis Stevenson were familiar to American newspaper readers, with newspaper publishers and editors searching for new talent everywhere. They do not have so difficult a task today, their problem one of selection, rather than of discovery. More than 500 syndicated feature "columns" are available, from bedtime tales to instructions in skiing.

The Washington Post day in and day out, seven mornings a week, brings to its 100,000 readers the BEST feature column material available.

Compromise On The Tax Bill.

Many objections can be raised against the District tax bill as it has been reported out of conference. It imposes a heavy new burden on real estate. It retains the indefensible levy on intangible personal property, which has already proved a failure. The gross receipts tax on business firms and professional groups has been substituted for the income tax. And the measure still carries the Tydings rider dealing with retail price maintenance, which has no relation whatever to new revenue for the District.

On the other hand, the committee deserves credit for eliminating a number of obnoxious features. The inequitable levy on land and the chain store tax are both out. By elimination of unreasonable items from both the Senate and House bills, the estimated yield of revenue has been brought much closer into line with the actual needs of the District. Moreover, the camouflaged sales tax has undergone substantial improvement since it was first approved by the House. In addition to reducing the rate, the conference committee doubled the exemption.

A tax on business in some form was inevitable as soon as the income tax was discarded. This levy should be clearly recognized as a tax on consumers. In that respect it differs very little from the more direct types of sales taxes. Despite its inequitable features, it will have the virtue of bearing upon transients here and residents alike. In a city where people come and go as much as they do in Washington that may prove to be a real advantage.

The important consideration at this time is enactment of some tax measure that will raise adequate funds to cover the prospective deficit. If any of the new levies should prove unsatisfactory, there will be a good opportunity to have them modified when the special tax survey authorized in this bill has been completed. In some respects that is the most hopeful section of the bill. It should lead to the development of a scientific revenue system under which the burden of supporting the community would be equitably divided among all benefiting groups.

Since the enactment of a tax bill is urgent and this study is to be made in any event, local agencies may well support the conference bill. Attention can then be devoted wholeheartedly to working out improvements that are not obtainable in this session of Congress.

Minimizing Marine Disaster.

An inquiry into the fire which burned the "City of Baltimore" in Chesapeake Bay has been ordered for this morning. Whatever else may be revealed, no formal investigation is needed to make it clear that the small steamer's captain and crew demonstrated superb seamanship in handling the craft. Instead of four lost, the toll might easily have reached disaster proportions if cool heads had not directed the passengers.

For this, the Steamboat Inspection Bureau of the Department of Commerce may share the credit. Only ten days before, one of its master inspectors had boarded the fated ship and given its personnel a thorough fire drill. This fortunate coincidence came about as a result of the bureau's particular concern for coastwise and excursion ships, many of which are close to retirement age. To compensate for their near obsolescence, every effort has been made to raise the human elements in their operation to maximum efficiency. Thus the crew of the "City of Baltimore" was equal to the emergency when an explosion occurred 2 miles off shore.

Caution, too, has been made a by-word of navigation by the steamboat bureau. Accordingly, when a Potomac River excursion boat recently broke a paddlewheel some miles downstream, its master chose to inconvenience the passengers by waiting several hours for assistance rather than taking a chance in running to dock.

However, all the drilling and all the precautions in the world do not make a full guarantee against fire and other hazards of navigation. Since the Morro Castle disaster, a threefold increased research staff in the steamboat bureau has been concentrating on means of marine fire prevention. Fire-resistant materials have been developed for superstructures and it is agreed that they afford the only adequate protection against incidents of this source.

But, of course, few ships have been equipped with such safeguards as those built during the past year. To require all older ships to be stripped and their decks to be replaced with fire-resistant materials would be tantamount to confiscation by the Government. Hence, fire at sea will remain a disastrous possibility so long as one old ship remains afloat. In the meantime, the steamboat bureau should be fully supported in its effective campaign to impress all seamen with a high sense of caution and to school them strenuously in modern safety techniques.

The Wage-And-Hour Bill.

Unless the Senate votes to recommit the wage-and-hour bill, thus killing any chance of its passage at this session, a bitter and possibly prolonged legislative battle is in prospect.

Strong opposition to the proposal has developed in the Senate, and the House Labor Committee is preparing to report out a measure much more objectionable than the modified Senate bill. Whatever the outcome of the current controversy may be, there is no longer any danger that Congress will approve this innovation in social control without fully understanding the importance of the issues involved.

The debate in the Senate reflects many facets of public opinion definitely opposed to Federal regulation of wages and hours for a great variety of reasons. Southern Senators fear that a Federal agency with power to determine minimum wages might eliminate sectional differentials favorable to the Southern manufacturer. Labor leaders are apprehensive that the power of the trade unions to drive good bargains with employers may be weakened by governmental intervention. Many employers fear that a Federal agency would abuse its discretionary powers by setting standards that would ruin them.

Other critics are appalled at the magnitude of the administrative task involved in centralized regulation of wages and hours for the highly diversified industries of our country. Constitutional objections to Federal regulation of this sort are also raised. Those jealous of States' rights foresee Federal encroachment upon powers reserved to local governments.

The Black bill as rewritten by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, largely in response to suggestions of Messrs. Green and Lewis, has only the qualified and grudging indorsement of organized labor. Mr. Green favors its passage, to be sure, but hopes it will be improved by the House. One important trade union official is even urging postponement of action until next year.

From present indications the House is likely to disappoint Mr. Green, since its Labor Committee has voted to expand the discretionary powers of the Labor Standards Board in a way that he would thoroughly disapprove. Indeed, the committee's proposals would be quite unacceptable to organized labor, since they go far beyond attempts to protect labor against exploitation.

The Senate bill would prevent the proposed board from fixing minimum wages in excess of 40 cents per hour or reducing the maximum working week below 40 hours. Even with these limitations, however, organized labor is rightly fearful that Federal regulation might interfere with the efforts of workers to secure better terms on their own initiative.

In all the proposals under consideration the Federal regulatory body would be given tremendous discretionary power over the labor policies of private industries. Their fate would depend upon its good judgment and skill in administering a most intricate and complex measure. It would be a task that might well break the back of the stoutest administrator. And despite the best intentions, serious and costly blunders could hardly be avoided.

With employment increasing, wages rising and collective bargaining on a more secure basis, labor is in less need of protection against exploitation than at any time in recent years. There is certainly no pressing emergency to warrant a headlong plunge into a new type of regulatory experiment that is viewed with misgivings by many sections of the public.

Rational Water System.

Three years ago Washington's water rates were reduced 25 per cent. This year's District appropriation act erased the cut, restoring the previous rate. These extreme fluctuations seem to be best explained by the lack of planning which has marked the administration of the local water system since its earliest days. Like Topsy, it "jes' growed" when the city first demanded a municipal water supply and it has continued to function with similar casualness ever since.

Now, fortunately, it is proposed to put the water system on a businesslike basis. The Commissioners, with authorization from Congress, have appointed a committee to inquire into the District's water facilities. The three members, all admirably qualified for the assignment, will seek to determine what the system contains today, what it cost originally, and what its reproduction cost would be. With these facts available, rates can be set by reason rather than whim. Moreover, proper depreciation funds can be established and long-term plans laid for the future maintenance and development of the system.

This last is particularly important. Within not so many years the old aqueduct which has been supplying Washington with water for half a century or more will have to be replaced or at least thoroughly overhauled. In addition, the Capital's expansion will eventually necessitate a considerable enlargment of water facilities here. In anticipation of such needs, all other public utilities set aside funds every year instead of applying all surpluses to reductions in rates or tolls. The water system cannot too quickly be placed on a similar rational basis.

Chiang Talks War.

For more than two weeks after the present Sino-Japanese crisis began, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek remained secluded and silent. Apparently determined to wait on events before making his own position clear, the generalissimo let others do the talking.

But now this enforced silence has been broken. Chiang Kai-shek has spoken out. And it is a real portent that his statement reveals an unmistakable determination on China's part to fight back, if necessary, to prevent that land from falling into the hands of the aggressive islanders.

For well over a decade Chiang has been the dominant figure in China. Ruthlessly suppressing domestic opposition, so far as it lay within his power to do so, he pursued a distinctly Fabian policy with regard to Japan. Whenever faced by the choice between fighting the island empire or making concessions he has pursued the latter course. His government, aside from diplomatic protests, did nothing to prevent the seizure of Manchuria. It gave only half-hearted and belated support to the 19th Route Army which heroically fought the Japanese invaders at Shanghai. No effective stand was made to prevent the alienation of Jehol and of a large part of Hopei and Chahar provinces.

By thus avoiding war with an enemy possessing infinitely greater military power than the central Chinese government could muster, Chiang Kai-shek was able to consolidate his forces internally. But with each passing year he has had to reckon more and more with a public opinion outraged by the arrogant imperialism of Japan and the steady loss to that country of valuable bits of Chinese territory. And last December, at the time of his kidnaping at Sian, Chiang was forced to agree, as the price of his release, to make peace with the Chinese Communists and establish with them a common front against Japan.

It is not unlikely that, despite his political adroitness and flexibility, Chiang Kai-shek is no longer in a position to retreat in the face of Japanese pressure. This time retreat would mean the loss of all North China and would in all likelihood be followed by renewed efforts by Japan to dominate the buffer zone between China and Soviet Russia.

That is why, no doubt, Chiang Kai-shek has found himself compelled to raise the banner of resistance. China, he says, has reached "the limit of endurance." Not wanting war, it has no choice but to struggle for the protection of the nation and to fight "to the bitter end."

Apparently this statement is intended chiefly for popular consumption. There is still reason to believe that Chiang would prefer peace to war if peace could be had on reasonable terms. But the very circumstance that Chiang finds it necessary to beat the war drum at this time indicates that capitulation might prove fatal to Nanking. More than at any time in recent history, the Chinese people are aroused, and that fact alone may force the hands of the government.

The Japanese press is reporting victories for their troops. There is no reason to doubt the validity of such claims. But for such victories Japan is certain to pay dearly. For in stirring up that sleeping giant which is China the present generation in Japan may be preparing a legacy of evil for its children and its children's children.

A Good Appointment.

The appointment of John L. Rogers as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission is a reminder that faithful and efficient service sometimes receives its just reward, even when the Government is the employer. Mr. Rogers' selection for this important post will be welcomed by all those who know and appreciate the splendid service he has rendered to the I. C. C. in various capacities.

He entered the service of the commission as a mechanical engineer in the Bureau of Locomotive Inspection in 1917. Sixteen years later he became the executive assistant to the co-ordinator of transportation and two years ago he was selected to be director of the then unorganized Bureau of Motor Carriers. Thus his work and his preparation for that work as a trained engineer, accountant and lawyer have made him an outstanding "career" man and a logical candidate for steady promotion.

Many of our regulatory agencies are severely handicapped by the inexperience of otherwise well-trained and capable men placed at the head of organizations about which they have only an academic knowledge. If we had a "career" system in our civil service, offering opportunities for assured and steady advance to men of character and ability, the appointment of men of Mr. Rogers' caliber would be commonplace. As it is, the rewarding of a specially qualified appointee for past efficient performance becomes a notable event.

In Denmark there is less need of the Wassermann dragnet than here, because patients are not deterred from presenting themselves for treatment by cost, fear of publicity, or lack of convenient facilities.

Venereal-disease patients are received in every hospital throughout the country. In Copenhagen one hospital bed is allotted for this purpose to every 3,000 inhabitants. If this ratio prevailed here we should have 43,000 beds available in the United States and 200 in the District of Columbia. Unfortunately, most of our general hospitals refuse to accept known syphilis patients in the early curable stages.

In the District of Columbia, uncherished stepchild of the Nation so far as public health is concerned, there are no hospital beds whatever available for early, active syphilis.

Ra's Limitation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Harrison Tilghman, in The Post of July 17, writing on "The Cheops Complex," and referring to the words "Ra," "Ro," and "Rosenvelt," has omitted one very important and appropriate fact.

The word or syllable, "Ra," in its application to ideas of deity, kingship and light, is one of the oldest roots known, apparently deriving from the lost original tongue of the white race before its separation into Hamitic, Semitic and Aryan branches. In the Hamitic, besides the name "Ra," it is a component of the divine name Osiris (Hesi-ri), and is represented in the hieroglyphics by the picture of an eye (the All-Seeing Eye). It occurs in the islands of the Pacific in the form "Ra" (the sun), and in Hawaii in the name of the god Rono or Orono. In the Semitic it appears in the verb "raah" (he sees) and the noun "roeh" (seer or prophet). In the Aryan, we find it in the forms "aurora" and its variant "aushasha"—the pre-Aryan "r" being similar to, that in "Dvorak."

From the first form of these roots we have "rajah," "ranee" (queen), "rex," "radiate," "rule," etc.; from the second form the Lithuanian "auszta" (it grows light), the Old German "Ostara" and the English "east" and "Easter." The root is also found in many names of Greek and Roman gods, such as Ares, Artemis, Ouranos, etc.

But this is the significant fact which Mr. Tilghman omitted: The mighty and divine Pharoah, son of Osiris Ra, who is called in the inscriptions, "Lord of Heaven, Lord of Earth, Lord of Time, Dispenser of Breath, Pillar of Heaven, Threshold of Earth, Weigher of the Balances of Two Worlds"—this mighty ruler could not set aside the decisions of the Supreme Court of Egypt, nor alter its decrees.

'Lesson In Fortitude.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The tragedy of the terrible accident on Crain highway, when seven youthful victims were plunged to a horrible death by fire, has given to us a remarkable 'esson in Christian fortitude and forgiveness.

In these troublous days, when nations are at each other's throats, it is refreshing to see such a spirit, as the Lammers possess, in action. Theirs is not the old Mosaic injunction of "an eye for an eye," but instead, "blessed are the merciful." Their regard for the feelings of the truck driver involved in that fateful accident reveals a noble nature.

Coronation Stamps.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of July 25, under the caption "The Washington Philatelist," Mr. William M. Stuart apparently criticizes the British government for issuing reprints of the current Coronation stamps.

Even if the quoted "word from London" that "the trade have now received second deliveries of the Coronations for the crown colonies, etc.," though contradictory to accredited reports printed in several other philatelic publications is authentic, the second deliveries of the Coronations for the Crown colonies in fairness cannot be classified as reprints. The generally accepted definition of "reprints" is stamps produced from original plates of obsolete issues but not good for payment of postage.

In the official announcement that there would be an issue of stamps to commemorate the Coronation, the Crown agents of London said the stamps for the colonies would be on sale until December 31, 1937. Thus the Coronation stamps cannot be considered obsolete.

Serve Two Masters?

To the Edtior of The Post—Sir: Just a gentle reminder to the vast number of Government workers who are being pushed and pulled to enlist under the C. I. O. banner, that they give some thought to that old adage about serving two masters faithfully. It is even more applicable today than when recorded in the Bible centuries ago. They should know that they cannot serve both John L. Lewis and the United States Government honestly and faithfully and, surely, they are not going to bite the hands of Uncle Sam who feeds them.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Another striker "peacefully picketing" is killed by those murderous villians, the police. Quick! write another editorial denouncing the police and extolling those quiet, well-behaved pickets of the C. I. O. who are only "peacefully" persuading the men who want to work not to do so.

Sen. Minton's Amendment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The papers reported that Senator Minton has, in violation of the "gentlemen's agreement," offered an amendment to the new judiciary bill requiring seven of the nine judges of the Supreme Court to concur in holding an act of Congress unconstitutional. One wonders if he is moved by mere perversity or ignorance.

Perhaps constitutional law was not taught in the school where he took his law course, for it is inconceivable that a lawyer with such degrees could be ignorant of the fact that the authority of Congress to hold acts of Congress unconstitutional is an element of the "judicial power" of the Nation which is vested in the court by the Constitution, and that a majority decision is all that is required or necessary.

Congress can no more interfere with the exercise of this power of the court than it can dictate to the court how it shall decide a case. Such an act would be an unconstitutional invasion of this constitutional prerogative of the court, and the court would either ignore it or hold it unconstitutional.

But aside from the unconstitutionality of such an act, such a law would put it within the power of three judges to sustain the constitutionality of a law that six of, perhaps, the ablest judges believed unconstitutional.

View Of Communists.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the letter of Martin Chancey, who signs himself "City Secretary, Communist Party of Washington," in The Post of July 27, it seems to me that he, Stalin, Browder, Baldwin, Trotzky and other Communists ought to all get together, preferably in Russia, and agree on what Communism is. Then they might try to put his and their "democratic" ideals, for which he argues in his letter, into practice there, instead of the absolute personal dictatorship that exists there, with every person, and his life, liberty and pursuit of happiness, absolutely at the personal mercy and personal whim of Stalin and his O. G. P. U.

The difference between a Communist and a Socialist is and always has been that the former believes in the use of the bullet to bring about state ownership and the latter believes in bringing about the totalitarian state by the ballot.

The Communist Party is a revolutionary junta seeking to overthrow by force and violence our form of government and should be outlawed. Every real Communist would make the revolution worldwide. Any Communist who says he does not so believe is either making a false statement or does not know what Communism is.

'Servants'" Performance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The headline, "Congressmen Beg to Quit," in The Post of July 27 reveals a childishness which is a sad commentary on the tenor of the highest legislative body of our country. The audacity of some of the gentlemen on Capitol Hill—these "servants of the people"—is astounding.

As an American citizen whose forefathers fought for the preservation of our democracy both on the battlefield and through the exercise of loyal intelligence, I can no longer constrain from expressing myself.

Senator McNary, with other Republicans and professed Democratic Senators, obsessed with the idea of defeating one bill, have glibly thrown aside everything else. The important work to be accomplished—measures for the establishing of more justice and of vital necessity to the continuance of prosperity, among which are the wages and hours bill and the provision for slum clearance and housing—is apparently of little interest to them. However, these things are of interest to the voters who employ these men to represent them in Congress, and they will not be particularly pleased with the poor showing their "servants" have made during the seven long months just passed.

The Richardson Patent Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir In your issues of July 23 and 24, you published a news item and an editorial in regard to a Congressional resolution pertaining to the claim of W. J. Richardson for a rehearing before the Court of Claims in connection with his claim for infringement on his patent on the stream-line shell used by the United States Government in prosecuting its part in the World War. The writer, who is an old friend of the patentee, desires to call your attention to what appears to be an error in your articles.

I am not attempting to criticize the President in his reasons for vetoing the resolution. I am only calling your attention to what you set forth in support of the veto. In this connection you emphasized what you thought was pertinent and what its relations were to the Supreme Court controversy. Permit me to call your attention to the fact that the Court of Claims is an institution created by Congress for a specific purpose, which purpose is largely to relieve Congress of the tedious duty of investigating the merits of claims, and in connection with patent cases such as Richardson's, Congress is the only body to which an appeal can be taken.

Mr. Richardson was eminently justified in making the appeal as he did. Your reasoning is erroneous in this connection and can have no connection with the Supreme Court controversy. Neither does it do justice to the long and tedious investigation made by Congress over a long period. Had you consulted with the chairman of the Military Committee in the Senate and the chairman of the Claims Committee in the House, you might have reached a different conclusion.

There is another important issue involved in this case in which neither courts nor the Government takes full cognizance or responsibility. It is the custom of the Government, particularly in connection with the Army and Navy, to utilize the principles and claims of patents secured by private individual inventors, and afterward to ignore liability for infringements and royalties. This is particularly so in connection with patents where the only market would be in connection with Government needs.

If a search were made of the Court of Claims records, it would be found that a number of such cases have been carried on its docket for a quarter of a century or more. It took the Court of Claims 12 years before it could render an opinion in the Richardson claim.

I have always felt that The Post aimed to be fair and impartial in its opinions on the affairs of private persons as well as public. Therefore, I hope you will find a place for the above.

The Matapeake Ferries.

SOME day, the prophets say, there will be a bridge across the Chesapeake Bay, linking the eastern and western shores of Maryland. When that day comes, if it ever does, vacationing Washingtonians bound for Rehoboth or Ocean City or Bethany Beach will have lost the most interesting part of the trip: the brief but eminently satisfactory voyage from Annapolis to Matapeake via those faithful ferries, the John M. Dennis or the Albert C. Ritchie. Crossing the bay by bridge will be convenient, speedy and inexpensive, no doubt, but it will never have half the charm of crossing by boat.

With the exception of a few hardy souls who drive an extra hundred miles from here to Elkton, trips to the Atlantic's pleasantly sand-strewn coast are never contemplated without consulting the "Spring and Summer Schedule of the Matapeake Ferry." Without this complication, a swift and successful journey would depend only on a proper functioning of the motor and an absence of flat tires; with it, the trip is begun with little or no assurance that arrival will be made on anything like scheduled time.

Let it be added at once that no criticism of the ferry service is implied. The faithful Dennis and Ritchie seem to arrive and depart with a punctuality that should make Washington's streetcars hang their trolleys in shame. The difficulty arises from the fact that it usually takes longer to get to Annapolis than you figure, what with curves and twists and turns in the road, and trucks and vacationists in droves on its surface. Nor is arriving in Annapolis before the time of the ferry's departure sufficient to assure a crossing. The main question—as anyone who has made the trip on a Saturday afternoon in summer can tell you—is whether or not half of Washington and part of Baltimore arrived ahead of you.

Many a time you reach Annapolis well before the hour, circumnavigate its circles with success, and at last reach the final turn in the street, only to find a lengthy line of cars ahead of you—too many to leave any room for you aboard the boat, although its officers fill it to overflowing with all the skill of the proverbial packers of tinned sardines.

While more fortunate vacationists peer down with curiosity and a bit of smug satisfaction from the upper deck, many a car is left behind as the final loading is completed—and those who remain can only stand and wait an hour for the other boat to come to port—a whole 60 minutes subtracted from the precious time they had planned to spend listening to the Atlantic smack its cooling waves upon the beach.

But there are times when you get aboard without difficulty, the fates being in their kindest mood, and no crossing of the Bay Bridge will ever have the thrill you can gain by being picked by good fortune to make the ideal trip—a swift ride to Annapolis, with no trucks on the hills; a brief wait by the Naval Academy wall, and a successful arrival on the very ferry you had planned to catch.

Vacation begins when you step out of your car on the deck of the boat. The air is cool, the spray dashes gayly from the sides of the hull, and the crowd of passengers are obviously in the holiday mood. From the stern you can watch the panorama of the United States Naval Academy, with its green grass and gleaming buildings. On either side of the boat yachts and sailboats appear, scudding along the water, and overhead a gull or two explore the sky, apparently satisfied to trail a Chesapeake Bay ferry, without envy for more ambitious brothers who follow the coastwise boats and even the ocean liners.

There is a merry hum of conversation on board. Family groups are everywhere, pale, cityfied-looking folks who soon will burst forth in shorts and slacks and sunburn. Children beg for ice cream cones and hot dogs; mothers sit patiently along the rail, talking; fathers wonder if the spray that dashes over the bow is going to wet the car.

Before long Matapeake, that odd landing place in the midst of flat farm land, comes into view. Far behind now is Washington, with its offices and stores, its traffic laden circles and its humid heat. Ahead are only a couple hours of easy driving on straight roads, and then vacationland.

And when the John M. Dennis (or the Albert C. Ritchie—no offense meant) finally works its way into the slip at Matapeake, and automobile engines are started all down the length of its sturdy old hull, then, indeed, is a vacation well under way. There is great excitement in the air as the cars pour forth from the maw of the boat, eager to start on the last lap to happiness.

The bridge across the bay will be fine, when they build it—but it will never have the ferry's charm.

Telegraph Operators.

IF ANYONE should ask me to select the most courteous, efficient and conscientious class of workers that I have ever met I would have to name the telegraph operators, with whom I have had much traffic here and there in the last 25 years. It is my impression that they are not overpaid to any fantastic extent, but I have seen them working in the rain and sleet, with the water dripping off their hat brims, and I have often kept them overtime far into the night waiting for my documents, and do not recall ever hearing a grumble.

There was a man in New York who used to work Western Union wires at the games and fights—a sick-looking man with sallow, thin features—who collapsed at the ringside in the Yankee Stadium one night. There is always great tension along the working press rows at those big championship fights, and probably my friend shouldn't have been there at all. But he was there, jiggling his bug beside me on the shelf until suddenly, just as the main event went into the ring, he passed the word to the head man that he was about to cave in.

SO THE HEAD MAN quietly moved another operator into his place and we let him out, and the first I knew of his being ill was when it was all over and I was boxing up my typewriter along toward midnight. I had thought it was just a routine switch, but the relief man told me our friend was an invalid and had passed out in the aisle.

I didn't see him again until one of those miserably cold Army-Notre Dame days in the fall, when he bobbed up, skinnier than ever, to sit four or five hours, shivering like a homeless dog and rattling his bug with fingers blue from the cold.

At Harvard, Yale and Princeton a decade ago the athletic management liked to kid themselves with the fiction that football was strictly a game in the Big Three. They refused to roof over their press coops up on the rims of the arenas on the ground that this concession to the comfort of the Fourth Estate would suggest that they were currying favor with the press with a view to publicity and gate receipts.

THE TRUTH was that they knew they could command the publicity and receipts, anyway. This policy continued until the professional football schools began to outscore the Big Three both in linage and money. Then they all built roofs and windbreaks and put in electric lights.

Those were terrible days in the open.

The telegraph operators burned matches to warm their fingers and see the copy, and sometimes they would set fire to newspapers. The chief operator used to bring a couple of quarts of bootleg Medford rum, home made from molasses, and tasted like liquid soap but was very warming.

But after the work was over and you moved into the hot, close atmosphere of the hotel dining room or the train for home the rum would hit you like a falling gargoyle and sometimes all would go blank.

I never have understood the marvelous efficiency of the operators and the wire chiefs in maintaining the service in the open air in bad weather, or even indoors in the great halls where the national political conventions are running and hundreds of newspaper men are pounding out thousands of words. You just ask for a wire, and pretty soon there it is beside you and a man to shove the copy through.

Come flood, tornado or earthquake, they still manage somehow to shake together some kind of service, and if you phone some country operator at his home after hours in an emergency he will come down and open up shop and give you paper and a machine and wait around patiently until you have done your stuff.

The courtesy and sincere helpfulness of telegraph people are on a level with their ability to get things done under the most difficult conditions. I am not very good at singing praises, having very little practice, and I hardly know what has prompted me to this extraordinary outburst of sweetness toward my fellow man.

Congress Packs Up.

Congress will adjourn any day now, leaving the country nothing else to harass it except the heat and the Japanese beetle.

• • • •

The country can hardly wait for the news that the boys have stopped making trouble for everybody.

• • • •

Those Senators and Representatives will probably be glad to quit, too. It must seem a relief to get back home where stupidity is permissible but not compulsory.

• • • •

Considering the long time the boys were in session, America enters the late summer in fairly good shape, but it couldn't have held out much longer.

• • • •

The session was potpourri of investigations, exposures, recriminations, denunciations, beach picnics, civil wars, filibusters and demonstrations in contortion, which the country had to take without an anesthetic.

• • • •

Things finally reached a point where Congress was suffering almost as much as the public.

• • • •

A few of the boys tried to escape, but Vice President Garner was the only one who got away undetected.

• • • •

And he was caught by a Government posse in one of his own pecan-nut trees and brought back to Washington before he could throw off his Government uniform and disguise himself as a sensible American.

• • • •

In fact, the adjournment is now being delayed solely out of consideration for Garner. He needs a few more days to get his bearings and determine whether he is coming or going.

• • • •

Some of the solons would have adjourned long before this, except that they're a little afraid to go home. They are the ones whose wives read the newspapers regularly.

• • • •

The court packing bill was what mainly detained the boys. It was an issue that required them to exercise their consciences. And you can't hurry exercises in a region afflicted by chronic arthritis.

• • • •

Come on, boys, make it snappy! The country can't relax until it knows you have gone where you can't make any more trouble.

Mrs. Sanger has gone to China to fight for birth control and nobody can say she dodges the larger tasks.

Midsummer Garden.

The rose lies dreaming in the sun;
Tall cosmos nod across the hedge
Like folks who chat when work is done.
The bird-bath mirrors robins' breasts
In water, crystal-clear and cool;
A long-legged pelican salutes
The short, fat gnome beside the pool.
And like a blowing, glowing flame,
A lacylike red maple tree
Stands bright against the pine trees green,
Lovely in sheer fragility.
Oh, bards have praised in song and rime
The part that moonlit fountains play,
But charm a-plenty clings around

The Floating Franc

Success Of French Attempts To Balance Budget Seen Depending Largely On Co-operation Of Capital And Labor.

By Herbert M. Bratter,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

THE AVERAGE AMERICAN will be glad he isn't a Frenchman when he reads over the list of tax increases just put into effect by the Paris government. The citizen of France must now pay a 20 per cent larger income tax on any income above $750 per annum. Especially must he pay more heavily on his income from securities. His tobacco will cost him more. His postage and telegraph expense, his railroad fares and freight rates, and the price of imported luxuries—all are going up. At the same time the government, not for the first time since the storming of the Bastille, is making it a criminal offense for businessmen to raise prices.

France is in a tight spot, financially. The capital drain has depleted her gold holdings, large as they still are, to below the national war chest level regarded by the army as sufferable. Taking office as Finance Minister after his hurried recall from Washington, former Ambassador Georges Bonnet reckoned the year's "ordinary budget" deficit at about 7,000,000,000 francs and the "extraordinary budget" deficit at 8,000,000,000 francs. Ahead loomed the necessity of refinancing this year 10,670,000,000 francs of maturing debt.

The 10,000,000,000-franc exchange stabilization fund set up last fall was all gone, and, in the treasury's cash box, the cupboard was bare. The financial crisis was very real. Drastic remedies were called for. Like the late Blum government, the new one of Premier Chautemps asked Parliament for plenary economic powers. Unlike the Blum government, it was not refused.

Government's Lapse Of Support First Step.

THE DISCONTINUANCE by the French government of official support of the franc on June 30 was only the first step in a series of important efforts to level out the nation's highly unsettled finances. On July 1, there was promulgated a decree "tending to grant the government powers with the view of financial rehabilitation." In accordance with this law, a special decree was immediately issued for the purpose of price control. This was followed a week later by a series of important tax increases, aiming at a balanced budget, while on the side of expenditures, the outlay for national defense, railways, public works and local government are being drastically pared down.

As is so often the case elsewhere, France has made special recognition of the farmer's interests, and agricultural products when sold by farmers are specifically exempted from price-control law. Other prices may be increased without government authority only on penalty of imprisonment of one to six months and a fine ranging from 500 to 10,000 francs.

"Any increase in wholesale, semi-wholesale and retail prices of merchandise and foodstuffs," states the new law, "is prohibited." However, increases which would be justified by a rise in the cost of imported goods, by charges imposed by the government, or by other special circumstances recognized by the authorities, may be authorized.

It is clear that the government is determined to do everything possible to keep prices under control while it materially increases taxation. The tax increases now announced "to obviate the budget deficit" are mainly in the form of direct taxes on the public. In his urgent appeal to the country the French President admitted that "the effort asked from the country is heavy;" but, he added, it was also inevitable. It was "the condition of salvation."

Bonnet's New Program Calls For 10½ Billions.

THE REHABILITATION measure drawn up by M. Bonnet are designed to raise 10½ billon francs, of which 2½ billions is earmarked for the government railways. These measures, like "all Gaul," may be divided into three parts. The first group aims to suppress speculation, fraud and fiscal evasions, and will therefore evoke a note of sympathy in present-day official Washington. The second group of measures increases present taxes on "acquired wealth." The third deals with fiscal adjustments. These groups we shall take up in order.

The first group aims at those who "sell their country short." All purchases of gold or foreign exchange of a speculative character undertaken between June 10 and 30 are subject to a 100 per cent profit tax. Permanent measures are taken to stop fraud in connection with the taxes on income from securities. Among these, doubtless, is the matter of co-operation with Washington and other governments in the exchange of information on international securities transactions by individuals. In addition, various loopholes in previous indirect taxation statutes are being plugged up, for tax evasion has long been a scandal in France.

The second group is very broad in its application. The general income tax on "larger" incomes of $750 or more is raised 20 per cent, effective on 1937 income. Taxation of inherited real estate is raised by 8 to 12 per cent, while taxation of the income from various classes of securities is increased from 12 to 24 per cent. The taxes on income from foreign securities which, from the American viewpoint, means "hot money"are increased from 24 per cent to from 25 to 30 per cent.

The third group, which goes into effect only next January, is designed to increase the yield from cedulary taxes, from the various stamp taxes, indirect taxes, customs duties and the levies on importers. In general, the tax burden on imports is increased to that which prevailed prior to October, 1936.

All French Railroads Are Being Reorganized.

THE ENTIRE railway system is being reorganized and co-ordinated with other forms of transportation, an annual increase of 2,600,000,000 francs being budgeted in the process. The state subsidy is being reduced. In raising freight rates, special consideration is given to the needs of the farmers. Passenger rates, moreover, will not be increased until the end of the present vacation season.

In view of increases in railway rates, the tax on gasoline—not including "tourist gasoline"—is raised, so as to equalize the charges on rail and road traffic. Moreover, postal and telegraph charges are increased and the government-controlled price of tobacco is raised 20 per cent by the Monopoly.

As is indicated by the emergency measures which have now been taken, the economic and financial difficulties are closely intertwined, and the one set of factors cannot be treated without attention to the other. Whether the present program succeeds in balancing the budget at a satisfactory level depends in important measure on the willingness of capital and labor to co-operate. The workers have made important gains during the past months of the Socialist, Popular Front government. These gains will not soon be surrendered. But it is evident that, for the time being at least, organized labor must moderate the pace of its further ambitions if it is to succeed in coaxing back some of the country's exiled and badly needed billions, rather than in driving more money away.

French capital, in turn, is needed to do its part at home, if the national effort is to succeed. So long as its owners remain frightened, the franc will continue insecure. Without co-operation between French capital and labor, production will not flourish, goods will be scarce, and a tendency for prices to rise will constantly stir fears of ultimate inflation. France well remembers its postwar monetary experience.

Of course, the French government might seek by rigid exchange control to halt any future drain of capital. It might proceed from attempts at price control to outright price fixing and a managed economy. But such measures would not restore confidence among capitalists. They do not suit the Frenchman's individualist leanings. They would be authoritarian.

As stated by a well-known French writer, the real question before France is this: Are a Socialist reform of society and the maintenance of a capitalist structure compatible? He thinks not. If not, the fifty billions of expatriated capital so symbolic of France's difficulties, will remain abroad indefinitely, while capitalism as a world system is put to drastic test in the French political arena.

Neutrality

By Barnet Nover

Senator Pittman's Second Thoughts.

NO BETTER argument for a discretionary as opposed to a mandatory neutrality policy has ever been advanced than that put forth Thursday by Senator Key Pittman, author of the more mandatory of the two neutrality bills which came up before Congress earlier in this session.

His statement was a plea in extenuation. The President has thus far refused to proclaim that a state of war exists in North China and has been criticized for ignoring what is an undoubted fact.

In defense of the President, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee argued that such a proclamation on Mr. Roosevelt's part, coming at this time, would do far more harm than good; that it would endanger American lives rather than help safeguard them; that it might result in a spreading of the present conflict rather than in limiting and localizing it; and, finally, that it might prevent the United States from employing its good offices to bring the present hostilities to a close.

• • • •

THE VALIDITY of these arguments is hardly open to question. And because this is so it is imperative that the President and the State Department, fully informed as they are regarding the situation in the Far East, enjoy complete freedom of action.

We have very real interests in that part of the world and the greatest of these is peace—peace not only for ourselves but for all nations. For a war on any scale is certain to create all manner of difficulties for us at present and in the future.

The essential question which our Government must ask is how these interests can best be safeguarded. With this no one quarrels. But what Congress in its blindness has done is to prevent any answers that may be given by the President and the State Department from being applied.

THIS YEAR the original neutrality law of 1935 was re-enacted with certain major changes. The law embodies a specific formula of action which the President must pursue once the existence of war is formally recognized, plus certain measures which, in his discretion, he may put into force.

War has now broken out in the Far East. The reality of that war is attested by the corpses of Chinese and Japanese soldiers at Peiping, Tientsin and other places in North China; by the devastation produced by Japanese bombing planes; by the reinforcements now being hurried to the danger zone and by the statements of the leaders of both nations.

Certainly the war now raging in North China is every bit as real as was the war waged by Italy on Ethiopia in 1935-1936 and that which, for more than a year, has made a cemetery of Spain.

In both of these instances the neutrality law was applied; in the case of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict it was applied with breath-taking promptness; in that of the Spanish civil war belatedly and it may be ruinously, from the viewpoint of our ultimate interest as a democratic and peace-loving nation. But in any case the precedent is there, ominous though it may be.

SENATOR PITTMAN points out that the neutrality act "grants to the President the exclusive jurisdiction in his sound judgment to determine when a state of war exists as between two or more countries."

That is true. But his implied contention that the President, by fiat, can decide that war is not war whenever it is embarrassing to the United States to recognize a reality, simply begs the question. For if it is wise for the President to have that power, then it is also the counsel of wisdom to give him the power to set aside the neutrality act altogether, no matter what the legal status of the conflict in North China may be.

This Senator Pittman is not yet prepared to admit. He only argues that it is in the present national interest to be casuistic regarding the war-proclaiming clause in the neutrality act, for if it is literally applied harm may be done.

But that harm stems out of the circumstance that it is the neutrality act as a whole which is dangerous since, once it is proclaimed, the President will no longer wholly possess that freedom of movement he needs properly and adequately to defend American interests.

SENATOR PITTMAN does, indeed, recognize that there is embodied in the law a definite series of limitations on the President's freedom. Should China or Japan declare war, he points out, then the neutrality act would have to be applied so far as the sale of arms, munitions and implements of war are concerned and, at the President's discretion, with respect to the cash-and-carry provisions.

Now it may no more be to this Nation's interest to impose such embargo on arms than it is to admit, at this moment, that a state of war exists. Yet the law becomes automatic as soon as a declaration of war has been issued.

It should be clear from this that we provide an incentive to whichever of the two contending powers is in a position to benefit by the American neutrality law, openly to declare war. That nation happens to be Japan. Hitherto Japan has rarely bothered with the formality of a war declaration before beginning hostilities. It hasn't bothered to go through the motions this time. But quite possibly it may, in order to make the United States its effective if unwilling ally.

Over such action on Japan's part we do not have the slightest measure of control. Which means that the determination of American policy at this critical moment lies not with Washington but with Tokyo.

Is there anything more absurd than such a situation? Overwhelmingly the American people are convinced that Japan today is the aggressor. Not the slightest interest would be served by Japan's victory; on the contrary very real American interests are certain to be damaged and possibly destroyed by Japan's imperialistic move in North China. And the impetus which another Japanese victory on the mainland of Asia would give to potential aggressors everywhere would only increase that international turmoil which threatens both peace and recovery. And yet our policy at the moment depends, in an important particular, not on what we may want to do but on what Japan does. Nothing better reveals the monstrous and dangerous nature of our miscalled neutrality law.

August

By William Lyon Phelps

Vacation Time.

August comes in tomorrow appropriately not only as the first day of the month but as the first day of the week, Sunday, a holiday, and I salute it! For August is the great holiday month of the whole year. Millions whose holidays are confined to one week or two, take them in August; and for the millions of students and teachers, August is the crown of the summer vacation.

• • • •

On the first day of August in the year 1890, five college students, George Pettee, Horace Hart, Austin Aikins, Charles Zeublin, and I, left the little village of Amsteg, where we looked up through the cloudless blazing summer heat to the towering snowtopped Alps; we bicycled until the way became too steep, then we pushed our wheels upward and onward until dark. At first it was fearfully hot; and part way up the mountain, Pettee and I found a little Italian restaurant sunk in a cave by the side of the road. Here we got a bite of lunch, and being faint with exhaustion, we decided to try the Italian red wine, which must have been Chianti. We were both unfamiliar with the effects of this beverage, and we learned something about it so quickly that we decided not to push our education further; but rather to push our wheels up the steep ascent. The scenery became even more austerely grand. We crossed the Devil's Bridge and our heated faces were splashed with the icy spray. In the afternoon we came to the great split in the road, and I begged my companions to take the St. Gotthard to Italy which none of us had ever seen; to me one of the magic lands. I was outvoted, so we climbed on to the still higher Furka pass. At this point Aikins gave out and he and Zeublin returned to Andermatt to find a conveyance to carry their bicycles. Pettee, Hart, and I climbed on.

• • • •

And now, not only the scenery changed, but the season. From intolerable summer it became autumnal; and a few hours later, in the same afternoon of this first day of August, we were in midwinter. We had a snowball fight, and at the summit of the pass, 8,000 feet above the sea, we gave a long cheer for everything in general. We slept in an inn at the summit. And that night, remembering the heat of the morning, we walked out in a midwinter scene; deep snow everywhere. The full moon rose and covered the mountains with radiance.

Tom McCarthy

Shades of the Old Deadwood.

DEADWOOD, S. DAK., July 28.—"What have you got here, a branch of the House of David?"

"No mister, those are members of the Deadwood Whisker Club," I was told.

"What's that?"

"Well, it cost a dollar and a half to join, and $15 if you shave. But the whisker club boys are just the early birds. Hang around here for about a week, and you'll see more beards than you ever saw before in your life. If it wasn't for the tourists the barber shops would have to close up."

TOM McCARTHY.

Every year, about this time, the historic city of Deadwood prepares for its annual show, commemorating those turbulent gold rush days of 1876, with a mass disavowal of the razor. The chamber of commerce meets to discuss the plans for the "days of '76," looking very much like a delegation from a hobo jungle. The town's bankers conduct their business over shining mahogany desks, which reflect faces hidden behind straggly beards which would shame the most indifferent "Weary Willie."

Stamping ground of "Wild Bill" Hickock, "Calamity Jane" and "Poker Alice," Deadwood takes its community show seriously and every male in town co-operates at least to the extent of growing a beard.

WHILE THE REAL show starts on August 5 this year, with a three-mile parade of covered wagons, several hundred Sioux Indians from the Rosebud Reservation and innumerable cowboys, the old Town Hall is already echoing, twice weekly, to red-blooded Western drama, in the "Trial of Jack McCall."

Jack McCall, it seems, was the low villain who, without warning, dispatched that heroic gunman of the old West, "Wild Bill" Hickock. Deadwood takes its show seriously and co-operation is the keynote, as devoted wives and mothers push aside the supper dishes to deck themselves like the brazen women of the roaring gold rush days, for the good of the community and the edification of the tourists.

"Calamity Jane" is portrayed by Mrs. William Harrison, in real life the wife of a miner and the mother of four children. The local grocer, Clyde Pugh, has let his mustache grow and twice a week he handles the role of the immortal "Wild Bill." Cigar-smoking "Poker Alice" is portrayed by another housewife, Mrs. William Harper, and the villainous Jack McCall's only friend "Alkali Ike" is the masterpiece of Art Sours, who finds his master's degree no bar to portraying the ignorant, conscienceless, derelict who perjured McCall to freedom.

THEY DON'T HAVE to worry about authenticity in Deadwood, for plenty of its citizens remember those characters who made the city's name ring around the world.

"Calamity Jane" took up her place in Mount Moriah Cemetery back in 1903, and "Poker Alice" lived to run afoul the law until a few years ago.

While they give some of those hardbitten characters of '76 the benefit of the doubt in their community show, they show them no favoritism in private conversation. They didn't like Hollywood's depiction of their town's famous characters, and they rather deromanticise the memories of "Calamity Jane" and "Poker Alice."

Mr. McGahey, over at the Adams Memorial Museum, recalls the time "Poker Alice," who had survived the virile old days of Deadwood, faced prison on a liquor charge during the unlamented days of prohibition.

And Albert Gushurst, up in Lead, recalls "Calamity Jane's" last visit there, around the turn of the century, when police escorted her out of town with the warning not to return. Rum-soaked and poverty-stricken the famous "Calamity", rounded out her days on the gratuities of her fellow townsmen.

For "Wild Bill" they have nothing but admiration, but that may be merely due to the fact that "Wild Bill" didn't live beyond his time and the years have had a chance to gild his memory. While many can be found who knew "Calamity Jane" and "Poker Alice," the information on "Wild Bill," who died in '76, is mostly hearsay.

Passing on the stories their fathers told them, they will tell you that "Wild Bill" was always a gentleman. That he wouldn't have looked twice at "Calamity Jane." That he scarcely knew her, and that he was no murderer, only notching his gun when fired on first, or in pursuit of his duty as an officer of the law.

Many of these sons and daughters of the pioneers, while cashing in on the tourist trade brought by the fame of Deadwood's notorious characters, privately resent the fact that their less colorful and more law abiding sires have been utterly neglected by the historians.

• • • •

"CALAMITY JANE," they'll sniff, "why when she helped out in that time of epidemic, every other woman in town was helping out. Why should they remember her and forget all the decent, God-fearing women who really built up this country?"

Though "Wild Bill" has been given a respectable and heroic legend, he has been given a bad deal by the tourists. Not a man to be trifled with while he lived, the sightseers have spared him no indignity after death.

Buried in Mount Moriah Cemetery, above the town, his mutilated likeness, in Deadwood sandstone, stands buried to the knees above his grave. The predatory tourists have taken his nose, chin, trigger finger and strong right arm for souvenirs.

If that weren't sufficient to set "Wild Bill" turning in his grave, his writhings would no doubt receive further impetus from the fact that for publicity purposes they've buried "Calamity Jane" in the same plot.

As the crowning humiliation, they have surrounded "Wild Bill's" last resting place with a wall of pink quartz . . . a quartz with a tint which might best be employed in the decoration of baby carriages.

I walked from "Wild Bill's" grave to the cliff which overlooks Deadwood. The lights were coming on and they traced the city in a serpentine "Y." As the lights came on and the darkness settled down, it wasn't hard to visualize the city as it must have been 50 years ago. The buildings lost their look of newness, and the voices drifting up might have been the voices of those first placer miners. I felt that something was wrong with the new Deadwood. They were arguing over the virtue of the characters which gave it its fame. They had forgotten the qualities which all those old-timers possessed. They had forgotten the fearless gusto and the brave lust for living which had broken those trails.

TOMORROW: McCarthy talks with a real pioneer of the Old West, a man who knew "Calamity Jane" and saw "Wild Bill" Hickock when he was dying from a gun fight in a Deadwood saloon.

Adventist Head Says Religion Is 'Threatened'

Speaking to students enrolled in the Theological Seminary at Takoma Park, the Rev. J. L. McElhany, president of the world's general conference of Seventh Day Adventists, yesterday declared evangelists of the denomination now are at "death grips with infidelity, unbelief and a pleasure-loving world in which conditions have so rapidly changed that faith in the inspiration of the Scriptures has well-nigh been obliterated in the earth."

Blaming the teachers of evolution, Communism, and paganism with corrupting the minds and mode of living of countries, Mr. McElhany urged the students not to become associated with any of these movements but rather to combat the evils of paganism and to save the believers from fanaticism and from other errors that the enemy of God is seeking to throw into their work.

"Times have changed, the people have changed," he declared, "so that it is absolutely necessary for us to operate this theological school in order that we may train young men for the ministry in such a way that they will exalt the inspiration of the Scriptures and remain in a brotherhood to preserve our cause in unity. We must oppose the elements that would subvert and defeat our purpose of carrying to the world a warning message of the ultimate return of Christ, and the most effective way to do this is to build up our ministry."

Mr. McElhany spoke of the needs of advanced education in the denomination, of the constant development of its medical activities, and the consequent need of developing its premedical courses. He also spoke of the need of developing its church activities in qualifying teachers for State certification and requirements, and to give advanced degrees to young men who may be selected eventually to head college departments of denominational schools.

He urged that there should not be a mediocre ministry in any way, declaring that "a middling lawyer is a poor thing, a middling doctor, a poor thing, but heaven deliver us from a middling minister of the gospel."

Va. Dry Chief Describes Page As Repeal Head

Norfolk, Va., July 30 (AP).—A. J. Dunning, jr., chairman of the Virginia prohibition convention, which opened here today, said in his "Address of Welcome" today:

The prohibitionist, having explained to delegates that he got nothing but "excuses" when he tried to get a speaker to welcome them, said, "there must be something about this prohibition question which strikes terror to the hearts of our so-called leading citizens."

He described Page, a Norfolk State senator, who is opposing Lieutenant Governor James Price for the Democratic nomination for Governor, as "one of the leading figures in the repeal movement and one of those so anxious to pass the beer act that he promised it would be done without costing the taxpayers a copper cent."

Traffic Halted As C. I. O. Pickets Blockade Police

New York, July 30 (U.P.).—Two thousand C. I. O. pickets and sympathizers from shipyards and ships staged a sit-down strike on a crowded street, halted traffic and blockaded a Brooklyn police station today. Police locked all doors to the station.

The pickets marched and rode in automobiles to the station after a clash outside the Robins Dry Dock & Repair Co. plant. Seven men were arrested for refusing to give way and permit nonstriking workers to leave the plant. Three others were arrested in fighting near the police station.

Sit-down strikers from six ships docked at the Robins yard joined the shipyard strikers in trying to prevent more than 200 policemen from breaking up the picket line there.

Bolt Kills 3 Men Under Hay Wagon

Brazil, Ind., July 30 (AP).—Three men were killed and a fourth injured seriously here today when lightning struck a hay wagon under which they were sitting.

The men killed were Sam Boyce, 65; Fred Buckalew, 34, and Clyde Cheezem, 28, all of Center Point. The injured man, John Elder, 64, was brought here to the Clay County Hospital.

All were members of a threshing crew and had taken refuge under the wagon when a mild storm started.

Two Avoiding Publicity Wed Before Reporters

Omaha, Nebr., July 30 (AP).—Alvin E. Hurstad and Miss Viola McGuigan, of Wayne, Nebr., insisted they weren't eloping when they appeared at the police station here looking for a judge.

There was just one thing they wanted to be careful about, Hurstad explained after the ceremony. They didn't want any publicity on their marriage. No one told them, but they were married in the police station pressroom and most of their witnesses were reporters.

The Cliffords Sailing for Mauritius

Capital Travelers Recall Their Hospitality to Visitors.

The Bahama Islands, especially Nassau and Bermuda, will lose some of their lure for travel-minded Washingtonians now that the geneial Governor General, Sir Bede Clifford, has been transferred as Governor of Mauritius. Sir Bede an dhis hospitable wife have sailed on the Queen Mary en route to the little island off Madagascar which they will call home for the next few years.

Practically every member of Capital society who has wintered in Nassau or Bermuda has sampled the Clifford's hospitality. This last winter, when Nassau enjoyed record popularity among Washingtonians, practically no prominent traveler returned who coud not tell of attending at least one cocktail party at Government House.

It is the custom, incidentally, for new arrivals to register their names in a book there almost as soon as they land.

It will take the new Governor General of Mauritius and his family eight weeks to reach the island. One of their stops will be Capetown, South Africa, although Mauritius is about 2,000 miles from that city and 500 miles east of Madagascar. Because the island once belonged to France, French still is the native tongue.

Sir Bede and his wife—she is originally from Cleveland, Ohio—visited in Washington a winter or so ago and stopped at the White House. En route to their new post, they will go to their home in Devonshire to pick up their three young children, Anne, Patricia and Alice.

Roosevelt Clan Will Celebrate

Occasion Will Be 76th Birthday of Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Aug. 6.

Seventy-six candles will light a birthday cake at Oyster Bay, Long Island, on August 6, when Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the first President Roosevelt, celebrates her seventy-sixth birthday anniversary. The occasion will be a great homecoming for the members of her family at Sagamore Hill.

When that branch of the Roosethe Trans-Siberian Railway to bers of it are confirmed globetrotters, they all live within easy distance of Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt's home.

Mr. and Mrs. George Emlen Roosevelt have a house, Gracewood, at Cove Neck Road, Oyster Bay; the Kermit Roosevelts and the Theodore Roosevelts, jr., are both at Oyster Bay; Philip Roosevelt, who married Miss Jean Roosevelt, is at Dolonor, nearby, and within a short distance are Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Roosevelt at Hewitt, Long Island.

After the death of President Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt spent several years in travel. She has been several times around the world; made almost half a dozen trips to Puerto Rico when her son, Theodore Roosevelt, jr., was governor; and not so many years ago traveled to Europe to visit her sister in Italy and then on to Switzerland to see her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Derby, who were then living in Geneva for the doctor's health.

She accompanied her son, Kermit, on a trip around the world, starting from New York for San Francisco, going to Japan, across the trans-Siberian Railway to Moscow and visiting Berlin, Paris and London on the way home.

Some years ago Mrs. Roosevelt traveled alone to South America to see the secluded Iguazu waterfalls on the boundary line between Brazil and the Argentine.

Sun Bathing Most Popular Sport Among Washington Younger Set

By Elizabeth Ford.

The most popular sport among Washington's younger set this summer is sun bathing.

In order of popularity follow the more traditional threesome—swimming, tennis and golf.

The District and suburban wide survey gives swimming runner-up position by virtue of Mrs. Frederick Richardson's busy pool at her Fairfax estate—Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss' equally frequented tile-lined diving nook at Merrywood—and the pools at the Shoreham and the Wardman Park.

Tennis, it seems, is too fast and golf is too slow.

But to get back to the sun-tans which are being worn on every shoulder this season. Lucille Sheppard, daughter of Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, says that most of the debs and youngest men about town at the Army-Navy Country Club prefer a good afternoon of sunning to anything else on the sporting card. Every day about 25 of them gather there where they have formed an informal "club" of their own.

At the Richardson's White House," swimming gains a point or two on the score. Energetic Phyllis Richardson is giving so many swim parties that her mother can't keep track of them all. When Randy Richardson comes down from Old Lyme, Conn., next week, she will bring with her a friend, Miss Betty Marsh, and a house party is already being planned for a tentative date in the near future. There will be about eight guests . . . and the pool will be brimming full of swimmers.

Just about the best sun-tan of 1937 belongs to Mrs. Frank Allen, brunette and pretty daughter of Senator William H. King, of Utah. She acquired it between dips at the Shoreham.

Mrs. John Murdock, wife of Representative Murdock, of Arizona, also is a frequent visitor to the Shoreham's pool, and is always accompanied by her two sons, David and John and her daughter, Rachel. The other son is diving champion of Arizona and exhibits Class A technique on the board.

Cuban Visitors Embassy Guests

Several Small and Informal Luncheon Parties Are Held.

The Cuban Embassy has been the scene of several small and informal luncheon parties the last week for distinguished citizens of Cuba who were visiting Washington.

One of these is Dr. Carlos de la Torre, who is at the Hotel Martinique while in the Capital. He is former dean of the University of Havana. Also of interest to members of Capital society is the visit of Dr. and Mrs. Carlos Marquez Sterling. The former is the son of the late Dr. Manuel Marquez Sterling, ambassador to this country several years ago. Dr. Sterling, who is a member of the Cuban Congress, is at the Mayflower.

Envoy of Panama, Senora de Boyd Going to Canada

The Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd will leave the middle of August by motor for Canada, where they will spend two or three weeks. They will be acompanied by their children.

Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, is expected to return tomorrow from a trip by motor through New England to Quebec. She was accompanied by her children and her niece, Senorita Lupe Davila, and by Senora de Fuentes, wife of the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy.

Mr., Mrs. R. D. Connor Will Motor to Maine

The Chief of the Archives Department and Mrs. R. D. W. Connor will leave next Wednesday to motor to Turner, Me., where they will be guests at a house party. They will then travel through New England, returning to Washington in about two weeks.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

WE NEW YORKITES are let off precious little, and one thing to which we are incessantly subjected is that modern monkey-business known as the "survey." We are 7,000,000 guinea pigs, plied with various serums and constant barrages of questions. Our tastes in breakfast food are known to the wise ones of the Nation, also on which side we sleep, if any.

ALICE HUGHES.

The latest survey made here seems to me of vital interest, dealing as it does with one of the facets of our modern life which is of paramount interest and importance. Dr. Paul Studenski, who professes economics at New York University, has had 15 of his bright pupils asking 2,379 students and white collar workers between 18 and 25 about their drinking habits, and the results are interesting or appalling, as you choose.

The doctor's figures say that these young women drink less regularly and in smaller amounts than the young men on the list, do less drinking in bars and restaurants, and are apt to drink because others do—but that, on the other hand, their drinking has increased in the past two years. In my opinion hundreds of girls drink late in the afternoon because "cocktail hour" sounds pretty romantic, and because those sweet, tummy-ruining concoctions taste about like fruit juices.

From the standpoint of hope in this battle against the giant killer, Dr. Studenski's dope offers two comforting notes. First, hardly anyone likes the taste of the old enemy. Second, the whole weight of opinion was against women tippling at bars. I could almost be a Crusader on that point.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Want $500? Why, what a silly question! All you have to do to get it is write an orchestral piece which takes no longer than 20 minutes to play, and make it good, and the New York Women's Symphony, Antonia Brico, conductor, will fork over the $500 and play the piece next March. Simple enough—and what a nice way to spend August!

• • • •

Speaking of music and related subjects, New York University starts a course in jazz rhythms with the fall semester. The learned professor in charge will be the famed and talented Vincent Lopez, who will illustrate his discourses with solos on the pianoforte, and will bring his whole band to school to show the trickier tempi. So swing it, Prof., and I'll bet there won't be room in the classroom!

• • • •

One of the most astounding families of modern times checked in at a local hotel a few days ago. It consists of the Rev. and Mrs. Francis Payson Cook, of Richfield, N. C., and no less than eight adopted children—seven blondes and one redhead. Brother Cook has given up preaching and now runs a farm to feed the ten mouths. And I hope it is fruitful. Mrs. Cook explained to me that "The Lord just spilled these children on us." It was indeed a wondrous spill, and I hope they all eat well.

• • • •

There's a redhead girl bandleader here in town whose name is Betty Real, and she comes to bat with a brand new peeve. She charges that her one-time agent, named Moss, tried to make her change her name to Gloria Love—one of those handles usually affected by minor movie actresses. But not for Betty, evidently a smarter sort of girl. Her real name is good enough—and don't throw that flower pot!

Equal Rights Proponents Celebrate

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The spontaneous vote of the national convention of the Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs to support the equal rights amendment was evidence of the revolt among intelligent women workers against protective legislation, Mrs. Helen Hunt West, acting chairman of the Congressional committee of the Woman's Party, declared last night at the dinner given in the garden of Alvah Belmont House, party headquarters, in celebration of recent triumphs for the measure.

Officers of national organizations which have indorsed the amendment attended the dinner, at which Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, former chairman of the National Woman's Party and now its national secretary, presided. Mrs Dorothy Dunn, legislative chairman for the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, was among the guests at the head table, each of whom spoke briefly for the organization she represented.

Mrs. West, discussing the action of the business and professional women as one of the most important victories the amendment had won, bringing 65,000 more women into the campaign for its passage, described the spontaneous demand at the convention for the national federation to add its indorsement to those of the ten other women's organizations.

"After a study of both protective legislation and the equal rights amendment, they turned to that which would give them the right to work on the same basis as their men competitors," she said. "They accepted it not as a theory but as a practical solution," she said, "giving women the same guarantees that men already have."

Important Work Done in States

Miss Anita Pollitzer, vice chairman of the national council of the Woman's Party and Congressional secretary, who spoke before the convention, reviewed some of the history of the campaign for the amendment and defined its present status in Congress.

It has had favorable reports from the sub-committees of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, she said, which means it is moving through Congress. She outlined the mechanics of the campaign for its passage and emphasized the importance of work through the various States to awaken women to its importance and gain their support.

Mrs. Edwina Austin Avery, chairman of the Government workers' council of the National Woman's Party, spoke of the recent victory, after a five-year fight, for the repeal of Section 213. The council, of which she is head, led the movement for repeal and was responsible for enlisting the other organizations in it. This triumph in the direction of equal rights will be celebrated next Thursday night with a dinner similar to that of last night, given by the council in the garden of Alvah Belmont House, at which members of Congress who aided the fight will be guests of honor.

Pretty Frocks Add Feminine Touch

Despite the fact most of the women present were ardent feminists, the gathering was notable for gracious feminine frocks of chiffon and flowered crepe worn by an equally gracious group of women, far removed from the accepted idea of a stern equal rights supporter of years past. Many of them, however, have been in the forefront of the movement many years.

Mrs. Nina Allender, who was among the guests, did all the cartoons for the old suffrage campaign. Mrs. Agnes Morrow Scandrett, aunt of Anne Lindbergh, was there, as were Mrs. Herbert E. Easterday, Miss Pearl Jencks, Miss Mary Boggs, Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, in charge of the sesquicentennial pageants; Mrs. Enos Newman, Mrs. F. L. Ransome, who is now a resident of California and flies back to the Capital frequently on short visits (incidentally it was she who organized the farmerettes during the war); Mrs. Karl Greene, who had with her Mrs. Blanche Boulware, and Miss Mary Boulware, of Silver City, N. Mex.; Mrs. E. B. Scheele, Miss Elizabeth Connolly, Miss Gaeta Boyer, of the People's Mandate Committee; Miss Margaret Lutz, Mrs. Martha Souder, who was in charge of the dinner arrangements; Miss Elsie Reizer, Miss Edith Swanson, Miss Mary Linkins, Miss Rebecca Blaine, Miss Nazleh Vizetelly, who is here from Seattle, and Regina Ewalt.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

Dr. Logan Clendening.

Bits of Summer Advice.

"Now that midsummer is here, with all its heat, many of your readers will be taking ocean voyages. Won't you please tell us something about seasickness?"

I hope many of you do take ocean voyages this summer. Nowadays the steamers are nearly all so large that there is very little motion. The novice in ocean travel dreads seasickness and usually finds his fears were all unnecessary. Most of these travelers, if they do have seasickness at all, have it from anticipation. They have mental seasickness.

Remedies are very little good. The seasickness preventatives you buy at the drug store before you sail are a waste of money. I never know one to do any good.

Seasickness.

Seasickness has nothing to do with your stomach. It is due to the disturbance of the semicircular canals in the ear, which control equilibrium. Any sudden change of position upsets these and causes vertigo and vomiting.

The best preventative of seasickness is courage—a determination to enjoy the rolling and plunging of the boat, to glory in the wind and the spray.

It that doesn't work, about the only thing to do is to go to your berth, and let nature take its course.

If you are going camping or traveling this summer, remember that you can't suddenly slough off all the rules of modern living. Fundamental rules of health can't be ignored. Germs don't take a vacation.

Neither a frilled dress nor a sweaty shirt is an appropriate costume for camp life. Wash your hands before and after every meal. Dirty dishes, even if they are tin, are just as disgusting in camp as at home. Soiled bedding out under the stars is no nicer than in your pink and white boudoir.

Pasteurized sweet cider is a good laxative summer drink. Apple powder is also available for dysenteries.

For babies, mother's milk now is furnished in bottles and in the form of frozen mother's milk. It can be stored for quite long periods. No form of milk compares to mother's milk for the premature infant. In Boston there is a directory for mother's milk. Likewise in New York. Such institutions should be in every community.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp to Dr. Logan Clendening in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

New Woodwork Finish Resists Sticky Fingers

The mother with young children, whose hands are very often sticky with jam, need no longer worry about little finger marks over the white woodwork of the home. Chemists have now perfected a new white finish, described as "the whitest white you ever saw," which resists dirt and dust.

G. O. P. Club Will Open On Monday

Mme. Cantacuzene Will Be at Desk Monday in Old McCagg House.

Rent Paid for First Two Years on League's Headquarters.

Monday the new headquarters of the League of Republican Women in the old McCagg house at 1301 Seventeenth street will be officially "open." There is to be no reception or other special observance, but the clubhouse will be available to members of the league and their friends and the president, Mme. Cantacuzene, will be at her desk in the board room on the second floor.

The new headquarters will be inaugurated with a fund in the bank to cover the rent for two years of the three for which the house has been leased. Part of the furnishings were those of the rooms the league occupied in the old National Capital Club; those in the board room have been provided by Mme. Cantacuzene, only equipment for the dining room and kitchen has been purchased by the league, and there have been other individual gifts making it possible for the organization to open its clubhouse entirely clear of debt.

Many Generous Contributions

Framed and hanging in the hallway is an acknowledgment of the generous gifts listing the names of the donors. Several business firms in Washington gave materials and labor in connection with the repair and renovation of the building. Among the individual contributors were Mrs. Anne Archbold, Mrs. William Proctor, of Maine; Mrs. George Burnham, of California; Mrs. Guy Despard Goff, Mrs. Chester Castle Bolton, of Ohio; Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Mrs. John Henry Gibbons, Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew, Mrs. Charles Lea, Mrs. David A. Reed, Mrs. Charles D. Walcott and Mr. George H. Lorimer, the only man on the list.

Although the National Republican Women's Club has its headquarters in New York and the league is only a District organization, the latter is nevertheless in a position to be of more than local influence because of its location in the Capital, Mme. Cantacuzene points out. It serves the national committee and also creates a friendly atmosphere for constituents of members of Congress who are visiting in Washington. Another service it expects to extend to clubs over the country is that of providing information on measures before Congress about which they desire specific information.

Mme. Cantacuzene, who expects to go to Maine for part of August, is remaining in Washington until after the meeting of Republican national committeewoman, which has been called by Chairman John Hamilton for August 11. Their coming will give the league its first opportunity to act as hostess to a group of visiting women of the party in its new headquarters.

Young Republicans Have Third Floor

On the first floor of the clubhouse is a large lounge and, across the hall, the dining room. The second floor includes the board room, the secretary's office, a small conference room and the housekeeper's apartment. The third floor, on which there are four rooms, will be the headquarters of the Young Republicans and Mrs. Cooper Rhodes, chairman of the women's division, has been made a member of the house committee of the league, of which Miss Mary Sheridan, eldest daughter of Gen. Phil Sheridan, is chairman.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

A STYLE SHOW in which the mannequins were also the modistes was presented last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Hambleton in Somerset, Md. It was given by the girls of the 4-H Club, of which Helen Bryan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Bryan, is president, and was attended by more than 100.

Fashion parades are always interesting, but when they are given by a club of 4-H girls, wearing the pretty frocks they have made themselves, the spectators can be counted on for genuine enthusiasm as the models appear. Last night they stepped out of a large book as the pages were turned by Claire Ice and John Farrell. It had been placed on the terrace back of the Hambleton home, where the guests were seated. The garden was lighted with Japanese lanterns and a spotlight was focused on the book, which Mr. Hambleton had made for the occasion.

the models, who wore silk prints, sheers, cotton dresses, coats or suits they had made, included Helen Bryan and her sister, Betty; Edwina Hambleton and her younger sisters, Jean and Nancy; Caroline and Marjorie Gould, Harriett Balcom, Ann Carmody, Lois and Pauline Gish, Meredith Huntington, Margaret Saylor and Claire Rice, who took time out from turning pages long enough to step in and out of the book herself.

The 4-H Club of Somerset has 13 active members and meets monthly during the school term, but in the summer has weekly meetings up to the time of the county rally. The annual county meeting was held Thursday in Germantown, attended by all the girls of the group, and there Edwina Hambleton won the gold medal for her sheer blue print dress and white flannel coat, and also the privilege of styling her costume at the State rally next week in College Park. Other members who will have the honor of participating in the fashion show at the State meeting will be Helen Bryan. Caroline Gould and Jean and Nancy Hambleton. The girls go there with high hopes of winning a much-coveted prize—a trip to the national 4-H rally in Chicago next winter, which will go to the girl whose costume is selected as the best in the State.

The Somerset club was organized four years ago, and the members have been working under the supervision of Miss Edith Turner, the county agent, with Mrs. Hambleton as local leader. They meet at the homes of members. The first year simple cotton dresses were their sewing project; the second, silk prints, and the third and fourth, suits, coats, afternoon and evening dresses, practically anything they desired for their wardrobe, for they were by that time capable of making almost anything they wanted.

MISS MARGARET LAMBIE, who spends part of her leisure time teaching a class of girls at the Y. W. C. A. how to make and play the shepherd's pipes, is now at her cottage in the Thousand Islands, where she has an appropriate woodland setting for her music. The sound of the plaintive notes over the water can be heard for a long distance and she and her friends who have summer homes there enjoy calling back and forth to each other—for piping has become a popular art since Miss Lambie introduced it in that part of the woods a few years ago.

Mrs. JOHN C. SHAW, president of the Fourth District of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs and an active member of the North Beach Club, as well as of several in the District of Columbia federation, is leaving to spend six or eight weeks on the Pacific Coast.

She gave a farewell luncheon Thursday for a group of her friends and co-workers. Mrs. Oscar Marshall, new president of the North Beach Club, was among the guests, as were Mrs. Frank M. Headley, president of the Maryland federation; Mrs. Frank Linzel, president of the Federated Church Women; Mrs. Michael J. Lane, corresponding secretary for the federation; Mrs. Charles Feeley, new president of the Woman's Club of Jessup, and Mrs. John Gardner, of the Jessup Club.

MRS. JOSEPH N. SAUNDERS, of the Junior American Citizens Committee of the D. A. R., having all the young citizens taken care of so far as their vacations at camp are concerned, is now off on her own. With her husband and son Bob, she is motoring to New Hampshire. They will stop over in New Haven, Conn., where Bob is a student at Yale, and then continue to New Springfield, which will be their postoffice and is near St. Gaudens, named for the famous sculptor.

Long Dance Frock Definitely Passe

Paris (U.P.).—It seems the short-skirted dancing frock is here to stay. Long, trailing skirts are not appropriate for summer, and the waltz skirt has been adopted by all the big fashion houses for informal summer evenings.

Tulles, sheer organdies, mousselines and starched chiffons are used for these frocks, which usually are sleeveless and backless with full ankle-length skirts of fold after fold of material. The skirts often are finely worked into a series of tucks or small puffs or diamond-shape designs. Some dressmakers edge the skirts with wide bands or ruffles in a contrasting shade or a rainbow of colors.

Garden Dinner Celebrates Victories in Equal Rights for Women

CHARITY—so called but is it real charity

The appearance of this advertisement in these columns is evidence that The Washington Post co-operates with and supports the Better Business Bureau for your protection.

Washington telephones are busily ringing—and, in many cases, those calling are professional solicitors propounding a plea for donations for some so-called charity. Better Business Bureau investigations have disclosed that professional solicitors and collectors were receiving the lion's share of money given for the charity. Charity solicitations, like investments, should be thoroughly investigated before donations are made.

Fruits Offer Substitute For Spinach

Broiled Grapefruit, Ices, Fried Peaches Are Recommended.

By Rebekah Blake.

As correspondent with a distaste for spinach and carrots asks that we give some suggestions for substituting fruits for vegetables in summer menus. She wonders if there is any way to get the necessary vitamins and calories through serving fruits in several ways at one meal instead of so many vegetables.

This is a timely question since fruit is so abundant on the market just now. Moreover, on an extremely hot day, fruit is about the only food that will really tempt a jaded appetite.

Most housewives know the familiar ways of serving fruit, as desserts and appetizers, but there are less familiar ways by which fruit may become more substantial part of the meal. For instance, broiled grapefruit, though not in good season now in its fresh state, is an excellent accompaniment for meat in a meal, and may take the place of a green vegetable. Of course, this form of fruit is also good as an entree. Canned grapefruit sections may be used in this manner in off seasons.

A fresh fruit salad is a main standby for summer meals. If ample enough, it may be served as the main course of the meal. If desired, you may add small cubes of cold or leftover meat or chicken to the fruit. This will make it even more substantial.

Oranges and lemons are healthful as well as tempting foods which can be used in many ways to nourish as well as refresh.

An iced orange consomme is a grand beginning to a summer luncheon or dinner. It is a more refreshing appetizer than soup of vegetable stock or meat broth consomme.

Iced Orange Consomme.

1 tablespoon gelatin
¼ cup cold water
Let stand 5 minutes. Add
1 cup orange juice, heated over hot water
Stir until dissolved. Cool. Add
2 cups orange juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Broiled fruit served with chops or with roasts enhances the flavor of the meat itself and may replace vegetables in the meal. Pears, peaches and apricots are especially suited to broiling and serving this way. Drain the fruit and arrange it on the broiler, either on the wire rack or in a shallow pan that can be easily removed from the broiler. In the cavity of the fruit place a bit of butter and sprinkling of sugar, either white or brown. A light touch of spice, such as cloves, allspice, cinnamon, mace, cardamon or nutmeg, may be added.

Fried fruits are also good substitutes for vegetables. Fry peaches in plenty of butter melted in a hot frying pan. Add a light sprinkling of sugar just before you add the peaches to the skillet. Pineapple may be treated in the same way. Sliced bananas, also tomatoes (considered fruit by many), may be fried to a delicious brown by first rolling them in flour or fine bread crumbs, then frying in butter.

Fresh applesauce will make a healthful hit at any meal, and apples are plentiful on the markets now. Add some spice to your sauce to give it zest.

The vogue for serving ices with the meat course is a good one, but there are certain ices that should be served with each variety of meat. Mint ice is a favorite with lamb, but also enhances the flavor of ham. A frozen combination of orange and grapefruit juice with syrup is a real tempter with pork chops or a pork roast. Frozen tomato juice seasoned with a dash of onion or lemon juice is ideal when served with roast beef. The flavors of grape juice and ham go well together, so why not frozen grape juice served as a complement to baked ham? Try serving lemon ice with roast pork. The tart flavor of the lemon enhances the flavor of the pork.

Boiled rice with bits of orange segments, filled into orange shells and baked slightly, will add interest to your meal and will be refreshing. Serve one stuffed orange to each person. You may also stuff orange shells with mixed fruits and serve as a cocktail, meat accompaniment, salad or dessert.

The following recipes may also come in handy when you are substituting fruits for vegetables in your summer meals:

Spiced Cantaloupe.

Peel rind and cut cantaloupe into 1-inch pieces. Soak over night in weak vinegar. To each seven pounds of fruit add three pounds of sugar, eight sticks of cinnamon and one tablespoon of whole cloves. Cook about an hour and a half, or until the fruit becomes transparent. Place in sterile jars and seal. Serve with fowl or meats.

Baked Bananas.

2 tablespoons melted butter
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1-3 cup sugar

Remove skins from bananas, cut in halves lengthwise and place in shallow pan. Mix the melted butter, sugar and lemon juice and pour over the bananas. Bake in a slow oven for 30 minutes.

Baked Oranges.

2 cups sugar
1 cup water

Oranges were boiled in

Wash oranges, place in kettle and cover with boiling water. Cook until tender when tried with a fork. Remove from the water, cut in half and arrange in a baking dish. Cook together the sugar and orange water for 5 minutes, pour over the oranges and dot each orange with a piece of butter. Cover the baking dish and bake in a hot oven about one-half hour, or until the oranges become transparent. Serve with meat.

Use More Fruit in Summer Meals

To many persons, fruits are more enjoyable on summer menus than are vegetables. If this is true in your family, make substitutions. For an interesting course in your dinner, stuff orange shells with boiled rice containing bits of orange sections. Such a serving at each place will add color to your table and will be a joy to jaded appetites.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Divorced Woman of 46 Loves Husband of Lifelong Friend; They Wish to Marry: "What to Do?"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a woman of 46. I have been married and divorced. I have a grown son. I am in love with, and loved by, a married man of 44, who has been married 24 years to a woman I have known since childhood. In fact, her family and mine were lifelong friends, although I did not meet her husband until two years ago. From our first meeting, this man and I were very much attracted to each other. After we had known each other about a year, we started going about together, with no thought of love—just in good fun.

* * * *

I have never known such companionship as this man gives me. We never disagree on one thing. He says he simply cannot give me up and I don't know what to do, for while I did not love him at first, he has become my whole life. He has never loved his wife and they get nothing out of each other's society. They own a house, have some money in the bank in the wife's name, and their grown daughter—who has been married but has left her husband—is living with them. The man says he would sacrifice everything in the world just to have me; that he would willingly walk out of his home and leave his wife everything.

* * * *

There has never been another woman in his life save his wife and me. What is the best thing to do? The decision is up to me. I suppose I ought to be able to decide for myself, but I find I simply can't. Please answer soon. JULIA FRANCES.

* * * *

DEAR JULIA FRANCES: The man is "passing the buck" in cowardly fashion in leaving responsibility for making a final decision on your shoulders; and you, in turn, are attempting to thrust responsibility on still another pair of shoulders, namely: mine. Neither of you seems to be giving due consideration to the wife's place in the picture, and her right to referendum in the matter.

* * * *

If the husband is acting in complete good faith with you, he should be willing to prove it to the extent of telling his wife he no longer loves her, that he does love another, that he prayerfully begs his freedom, and is willing to pay for it by walking out and leaving her everything he has. If such is the actual truth, and he states it in a convincing manner, she may be willing to let him go. If he doesn't come out in the open, how does he expect to proceed with plans for divorce and remarriage? It would appear that he has little or no grounds for divorce and that she has considerabe ground.

* * * *

Of course, such a confession may eventuate in your being named corespondent in a suit for divorce, unless the wife is an exceptionally considerate women and as little interested in her husband as he claims to be in her. Are you willing to pay that price for him? It might be a good idea for him to have a confidential talk with a divorce lawyer before confronting his wife with the story of his love for you. Such a specialist in domestic entanglements could tell him in a jiffy whether he has a ghost of a chance of changing mates without doing irreparable injury to his life.

Chef Indorses Planned, Solid Meals in Home

By Ethel Ehlen

"KNOW WHAT is in your refrigerator and then plan your meals accordingly." This sound bit of advice was expounded recently at Virginia Beach by a chef of the old South, who has been planning menus, supervising cooking and originating recipes for more than 10 years. The most successful menus for a household are planned from day to day, he believes, as by this method left-overs are utilized and buying becomes more practical and economical.

Whether a woman must do her own cooking or can afford servants to do this work, she should know all about cooking, marketing and menu planning, maintains Ransom Jiggetts, chef at the Cavalier Hotel. And substantial meals, well balanced, are better from every point of view, he insists, than a consistent diet of fancy dishes and complicated foods. Vegetables particularly are badly cooked by the average housewife. His advice to remedy this is the old Southern method: Boiled for flavor and well seasoned to make palatable. The following are several of Chef Jiggetts' own recipes for appetizing Southern foods, especially appropriate at this season:

String Beans, Southern Style.

Wash the beans and stand in cold water for about 40 minutes. Drain and place in pan with cold water and a piece of Virginia ham or bacon (to suit the quantity of beans). Season while cooking with red pod pepper, and a bit of salt. Cook for two hours, or until the beans are well cooked. Serve hot.

Spinach, Southern Style.

Wash spinach before cutting off root ends to prevent sand from getting into stems; then wash through two waters and let stand in cold water for 30 minutes. Cook in boiling water to which a bit of soda has been added, for 30 minutes. Drain through colander, very dry. Then saute spinach in butter and bacon drippings. Season to taste and serve hot.

Summer Squash.

Select tender squash and cut off the ends. Cut squash into six or eight pieces. Wash in cold water. Boil in plain water until tender or well cooked. Drain very dry, then mash. Mince some bacon or salt pork, and cook in saute pan until half cooked. Mince some onions and add to the bacon or pork. Cook all together to golden brown color. Add squash and toss over hot fire until brown. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve hot.

Cream Coleslaw.

Shred cabbage with sharp knife or slaw cutter. Add to this one medium-sized onion shredded, a small bit of sugar, salt, mayonnaise dressing, vinegar and pure cream. Mix thoroughly and put in refrigerator for about 30 minutes. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

DINING out of doors has always seemed to our family to be just about the most exciting way to eat. Most homemakers, however, will contend that eating out of doors will just add to the already difficult task of feeding a family on a hot evening. A friend of ours who sets her table in the open air most of the time in summer has some good ideas on the subject that she passed on to us.

First, there is the matter of the dining table. It shouldn't be too small, so that plates and platters must be bunched up uncomfortably upon it. And it should be reasonably weather-proof so that you do not have the figets every time the sky grows dark and threatening and you are away from home. A wrought-iron table with a glass top is the answer, of course. And don't think that buying one just for summer "dining out" is too much of an extravagance, for such a table will add immeasurably to a sun porch in winter and may do duty for winter Sunday night buffet suppers.

Carrying a great number of plates and platters and vegetable dishes to a porch or lawn also seems to add to the difficulties of warm weather dining. It might save your footsteps if you invested in several large round platters or big chop plates that could hold your whole dinner—and you'll have fun arranging your meat, vegetables and garnishes on these. And don't forget your picnic thermos bottle—to keep coffee or tea hot and to save from jumping up for replenishments every now and then. Consider, too, those several-dish electric "steam table" servers that keep things hot and handy. A bread scoop is fun and grand for those sandwich evenings when it's too hot to cook very much. If you plan properly you'll find that you can serve a whole meal out of doors, from soup to nuts, without jumping up once. It takes trays and attention to details.

If your porch is so far removed from your kitchen as to make dining out on it too difficult, you can create a back-yard dining room with quite an air of elegance. Several small trees in butter tubs painted green will outline your outdoor dining room's dimensions in sidewalk cafe style.

Bob Burns Says

There's nothin' I like better than seein' a good horse race, but people out here wonder why I don't bet on 'em. It's just that I ain't a gamblin' man. The women folks of my family sure are against it. I'll never forget how hurt and disillusioned my Aunt Sophie was pretty soon after she was married when she found out that her husband gambled.

He came in one morning and handed her $5 and said, "Dear, here's some money I won in a poker game last night and I want you to go down and buy that new dress you've been looking at." Aunt Sophie says, "It hurts me to accept money that was made in that terrible manner—I want you to promise me that you'll give up that awful habit just as soon as you've made enough money to get a hat to go with that dress."

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Talent

The talent that exists among Federal employes here in Washington came as a revelation to us Thursday night at the Wardman Park Hotel, when the third of the auditions in the "quest-for-talent contest" was held.

We sat in the uneasy chair of one of there judges, and was left, in the end, on the troubled horns of dilemma. It was a difficult thing to say, with an unabashed face, that this performer was better than that one—when all had been strikingly talented.

All through the performances we wondered why many of those men and women hadn't tried to develop their talents to a professional end. Lesser artists have made the grade.

Certainly G. B. Sleba, of I. C. C., who played the violin, would be good for any man's night club—should he aspire to such a role. That wistful music of his would bubble in the cups themselves. There is a powerful appeal in his violin and there was an appeal in the pose he had while performing.

If the Wardman Park puts him in evening clothes, throws a blue spotlight on him, they've got something.

The music and dramatic committee of A. F. G. E. Lodge, No. 47, having achieved the first half of its program in founding the now successful Internal Revenue Orchestra, now launches the second move in its plan by undertaking a dramatic society within the bureau. Plans for the organization have been discussed by Joe S. Franklin, Mrs. Maude Anderson and Arthur W. Sammeth.

Those who would be eligible for the society will be announced shortly by the organizing committee.

Picnic

The fifth annual picnic of the Division of Highway Transport will begin at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon in Rock Creek Park, Reservoir Ground, Sixteenth street and Morrow drive. The program will continue until 9 p. m. All sorts of sports have been arranged. On the committees are: H. K. Craig, Mrs. Ella S. Stowell, Myrtle Boggs, Conya Hardy, Vera Mae Richards, Mrs. Fannie Weinburg, C. H. Quimby, jr., E. C. Stevlingson, S. T. Hitchcock, Helen Eckstrom, John T. Lynch, O. J. LaBell, Miss Glauvina Musselman, Dan O'Flaherty, B. I. Segall, Ethel Sugnet, Jean Hamilton, Katherine Jessup, Hetty Lawrence, L. S. Tuttle, Mrs. Alice Bradford, Frank B. Curran, Mrs. Gladys Eldridge, Cora A. Durst, W. Arthur Shelton, and A. H. Worley.

A Government employe, an art lover, writes us:

"Here is a secret to most Washingtonians—especially those who are lovers of Art. In the Library of Congress are three magnificent volumes of reproductions of some of the greatest paintings and drawings that have ever been produced in the world. These works are by a contemporary Hollander, William A. Van Konijnenburg; a man who though little known in this country as yet, will undoubtedly become recognized as the greatest artist the world has produced in our time.

"A few important critics (and all important critics who know of his work, I believe) concur in this opinion. Anyway, don't be skeptical until you've gone to see the books for yourself. The works represented here alone are a vast achievement for any one man and place him among the most prolific of creators. These constitute but a small portion of his output.

"The amazing thing about his work is its tremendous vitality and originality. So great is this, that when one looks at some of them one is so overwhelmed by their power that one feels himself either an immediate witness of the actual scene he is beholding, or an actor himself in the very drama the artist portrays. Another quality is the synthesis of achievement which they encompass. Essentially and dominantly modern, they yet are a unified and new expression of the qualities that have marked the great artists of all times."

The Historic American Buildings Survey offers an interesting exhibition. It is one of measured drawings, water colors and photographs reflecting the development of early American architecture and may be viewed now in the art gallery of the Interior Department Building, C street between Eighteenth and Nineteenth, northwest. These show generally the scope of the survey and reflect the regional and chronological development of the early architecture, Secretary Ickes says.

The majority of the pictures were done by persons enrolled in the various re-employment projects. Others were contributed by architectural colleges, architects and the National Park Service.

2 LINS 30 PT 6 COL SLUG HOUSE

When a free ferry began to take children of the Barney Neighborhood House area to free swims in the East Potomac Park pool this summer, house workers wondered what would happen to their July and August crafts classes.

"It seems to me remarkable that 50 children came to our summer school in preference to unlimited free swims. To make it possible for them to have the swimming opportunity, we rearranged our schedule and take boys and girls to the pool on regular days," Mrs. Margaret Merritt, the house director, said yesterday.

Not only has attendance been good at Neighborhood House this vacation—running to about 170, including adults—but the work done has been unusually good.

Probably the outstanding work of the school is being done by a group of larger boys who are not working on projects of their own alone but are making equipment for a playground which the house will open soon, and are widening the brick wall around the grass-plot court—which will be enjoyed by the whole community.

The playground will be developed from two lots fronting on the alley back of Neighborhood House on N street southwest. They are 25 feet wide and 60 feet deep and will be in use before vacation school ends on August 30.

The grass plot formerly had a very narrow walk around it. The "bigger boys," whose ages range from 10 to 15 years, turned brick-masons and are making the brick-work wide enough for two tricycles—so that even the smallest children can be taught traffic regulations on it.

Another project that has commanded the ingenuity of the boys is the making of equipment for the new gymnasium, which was formerly a stable. Movies and marionettes have been shown in the gymnasium during the summer. In the autumn, ball games will start. Inside screen have just been completed and painted by the boys.

The 12 boys making the highest number of points at the school will go to Camp Reeder, all expenses paid. The competition is stiff and earnest. Eleven girls have already been selected to go to Holiday House for a camping vacation in September, and three girls are at Camp May Flather.

The boys are graded on the excellence of their work and also on their sportsmanship around the house. Mrs. Merritt is probably proudest of the reputation the boys have made for good sportsmanship, although she displays their handiwork with considerable pleasure.

Even the small boys who are 5 and 6 years of age have contributed to the artistic appearance for which the 35-year-old house is noted. They have painted flower pots and set flowers to grow in them.

The girls are busy at Neighborhood House, too—weaving, painting, sewing. Seventeen of them are making dresses they can wear when real school opens. But the girls get boosted most in the spring when they have their Maypole dances.

The boys have made the biggest showing this summer—from little Tommy Hawkins who comes to nursery school and has learned to put the right shoe on the right foot to the "big 12-year-olds" who know all about beadwork, masonry and making playground equipment.

Art Gallery Landscaping Is Sanctioned

Parks Commission Orders 8 Trees on Site Transplanted.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday approved landscape plans for the new National Gallery of Art. These call for transplanting eight large elms from the center of the site on Constitution avenue, between Fourth and Seventh streets, to "corner locations that would save them for the new building."

Foundation work on the $10,000,000 building donated by Andrew Mellon to house a $55,000,000 art collection is progressing so rapidly that the transplanting will need to be done immediately, it was pointed out. Additional and complete landscape plans for the gallery will be discussed at the September meeting.

The commission reiterated its stand in favor of a Tidal Basin site for the proposed Jefferson Memorial, its opposition to erection of the abbatoir, and its preference for the Camp Springs, Md., site for the new Washington airport. It voiced no objection to enlargement of the present airport pending outcome of the Camp Springs proposal.

Approaches Studied.

Looking forward to approval of the Camp Springs site, the commission studied possible highway approaches and discussed the need for fast regulated traffic to any area selected. The problem of traffic control over the approach highway will be similar to that over the George Washington highway to Alexandria and possibly will be handled similarly, it was stated.

Thomas S. Settle, secretary, said plans for the Jefferson Memorial "that would upset no cherry trees" probably would move slowly, unless an appropriation "comes into view."

The commission will meet Monday at 4 p. m. with the newly formed Arlington County Park and Planning Commission to discuss the feasibility of developing as a parkway the 2.2 acres of Fort Myer cut from the other fort grounds by the Lee Highway.

Another indication that plans for the District must also include plans for the suburban areas was given when the commission authorized Chairman Frederic A. Delano to appoint a committee to co-operate with the Maryland Planning Authority on the development of areas around Washington.

Proposal Protested.

The first piece of co-operation, it was declared, will be in the area of the Peace Cross, where both authorities are eager that "some constructive landscaping take place."

Acting on the bill introduced by Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, asking that recently acquired park lands in Anacostia be used as an automobile testing ground, the commission strongly protested the "idea that we have more parks than we need."

It was reported that the vacant lot at Sixteenth and Lamont, near Powell Junior High School, has been purchased for a playground and will be converted to that use immediately. "They were getting ready to build an apartment there when we got hold of it. It is in one of the most congested parts of the city, where we need playground area badly," Mr. Settle declared.

Admiral Perceval S. Rossiter, surgeon general and chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery of the U. S. Navy, appeared before the commission to report that more than 50 sites have been suggested for the proposed Naval Hospital Building.

"If the building is approved, Admiral Rossiter will have no trouble getting a site that the commission can approve. The bill states, however, that the structure must be in the District or environs. The last stipulation would eliminate several of the 50."

The commission approved landscape plans for the new District Police Court Building and discussed aims for development of the area about the building, for which other municipal structures have been proposed.

Trade Group Votes to Close Military Road

Committee on Aeronautics Supports Efforts to Improve Airport.

Actively supporting efforts of officials of Washington Airport to improve conditions there, the aeronautics committee of the Washington Board of Trade yesterday voted, 18 to 4, in favor of closing Military road and removing "hazardous obstructions" on the Arlington Experimental Farm.

Approval of the plan to build a great commercial airport at Camp Springs, Md., with Federal funds also was voiced by the group.

Officials of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday asserted they still are opposed to filling Boundary Channel Lagoon.

Express Road Studied.

Possibility of an express highway to Camp Springs will be studied, Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the commission, declared. He added that it would be possible to provide a road similar to George Washington Memorial boulevard to speed traffic to the proposed 2,500-acre air terminal.

He asserted the commission was "concentrating" on getting the Camp Springs terminal, but had no immediate objections to the enlargement of Washington Airport to provide for present needs.

On Capitol Hill, Representative Andrew J. May, of Kentucky, announced that his bill for the improvement of Washington Airport would be held in the House Military Affairs Committee until Tuesday in order to give airport authorities time to appear and present their objections to the revised measure. As reported by the committee the bill provides that Military road shall be leased to the airport for 25 years at an annual rental of $1,000.

Thinks Offer Fair.

Fifty-six acres of Arlington Experimental Farm would also be leased to the airport on such terms as the Secretary of Agriculture should consider reasonable. May said last night that he considered the bill, as it now stands, "entirely unreasonable." The airport's offer to purchase the road for $25,000 was entirely fair, May declared.

At the meeting of the aeronautics committee of the Board of Trade yesterday, Samuel J. Solomon, manager of Washington Airport, declared the bill reported by the House Military Affairs Committee was unworkable. The rental value of the 56 acres of the agricultural farm, he said, was entirely beyond the means of the terminal.

Boy Caught in Fence Freed by Rescue Squad

A police rescue squad was necessary to free Alfred Taylor, 7-year-old colored boy, yesterday when he became wedged between a fence and lamp post on the playground at Eleventh and Harvard streets northwest.

The boy had been playing on the fence when he slipped and fell. Wedged between the fence and post about 4 feet above the ground, he was unable to free himself until police arrived.

Sewage Tax on Gobel Abattoir Proposed by Secretary Ickes

Declares in Letter Proposed Anacostia River Plant Would Put Heavy Burden on Taxpayers to Provide Additional Facilities.

Possibility of taxing the proposed Adolf Gobel slaughter house to the extent of forcing Gobel to pay for any additional sewage works necessitated by construction of his plant on the Anacostia River was foreseen yesterday.

The idea was suggested by Secretary of Interior Ickes in a 1,200-word letter to District Commissioners demanding that every legal step be taken to prevent building the abbatoir.

At the same time yesterday the National Capital Park and Planning Commission at its monthly meeting voted to continue to oppose erection of the abbatoir. The members will wage an unrelenting fight to get legislation forbidding its erection, Thomas S. Settle, secretary, said.

Elwood Seal, corporation counsel, said he would look into the laws regarding special "nuisance" taxes. Ickes mentioned a tax on meat packers who pollute rivers in Chicago.

"A business which is a potential nuisance is different from ordinary users of public property," Seal commented. "While Mr. Ickes' letter has not officially come to the attention of this office, we will look into the law and be prepared to relate the facts to the Commissioners when they meet next Tuesday."

Sees New Tax Burden.

Ickes in a strongly worded letter said:

"In this case, through the action of one company, the taxpayers of Washington would have to bear the burden of a $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 secondary treatment plant or lose the benefit of $4,125,000 already spent."

Ickes referred to a sewage disposal plant constructed with PWA money, which his agency loaned the District. He said if the PWA loan wasn't protected "by every legal means" the investment would be a complete waste.

Ickes did not hesitate to remind District officials of his "direct concern" in the way PWA money was spent, and warned them that the new sewage disposal plant will be insufficient to prevent obnoxious conditions in the Potomac River if the proposed slaughter house is allowed to operate.

The Secretary quoted at length from a report by Surgeon General Parran which stated that an additional disposal plant might be required if the new plant is overloaded. The new plant is built for a population of 650,000 persons, and the Gobel plant would add a burden equivalent to 140,000 more, Parran said.

"Despite the expenditure of $4,125,000 of public money," Ickes' letter stated, "conditions in the Potomac River may be just as bad if not worse than existed before this expenditure. This is tantamount to complete wastage of the public funds involved."

Mentioning that the Public Works Administration has a legitimate interest in seeing to it the expected benefits from money spent actually materialize, Ickes added:

"The Secretary of the Interior is charged with responsibility for the proper maintenance of the parks adjacent to the streams to be affected and of the Memorial Highway, which certainly would feel the effect of inadequate sewage treatment."

He concluded:

"I feel it is incumbent upon the District Commissioners to leave no stone unturned in their efforts to prevent the objectionable and dangerous consequences of which the Public Health Service warns."

Girl, 16, Hurtles Off Bridge After Row With Family

When they came to the bridge, she suddenly scrambled to the wall, and then hurtled to the water. Witnesses said she swam several stroke toward the Virginia shore, then sank from view.

Searchlights swept the river last night as police attempted to find Miss Beck's body. Thousands of curious men and women watched from the bridge and the river bank as the harbor patrol boat led the search.

From detectives investigating the case, it was learned the victim's mother, Mrs. Goldie Beck, and a brother, Harold, were searching for her at the time of the tragedy.

District Group In Senate Ends Hearings Today

Committee to Give Preference to Bills Passed by House.

The Senate District Committee today will hold what probably will be its last meeting and public hearing of this session to clean up the calendar.

Intent on getting as many bills as possible on the consent calendar for consideration before adjournment, Chairman King said the committee will give preference to bills that have passed the House.

More than a score of other measures are on the calendar, but as the House District Committee has abandoned meetings for the rest of the year, bills which the House has not approved would have no chance of enactment at this session.

U. S. Agents Seize Extortion Suspect

Arrest of Joseph Gladstone, 30, in Jacksonville, Fla., on charges of attempting to extort funds from a physician on threats of personal violence was announced yesterday by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Compromise Offered States Requesting Names on Mall

Parks Commission Will Permit Ohio, Maine, Oklahoma and Missouri to Choose Other Streets if They Withdraw Demands.

If the sovereign States of Ohio, Maine, Oklahoma and Missouri only will play ball with the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and not insist that the four new Mall driveways carry their names, then the commission will let them take their pick from among "almost any number of streets in different parts of the District."

"There is a fairly good list of streets in Washington that they can select from without it causing any commotion at all. We have them marked on a map and we are willing to let them make their selections in the order in which they were admitted to the Union. That would put Ohio first," Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the commission, said last night.

The commission pointed out that it has gone to considerable effort in naming avenues for the first four Presidents and considers that the effect of the whole historical meaning of the Mall development is being jeopardized by the demands of the four States—the only four not now represented on the District's map.

"Looks like they stand a good chance of getting their requests approved by the Senate; so we are writing Senator King and his committee making this counter proposition."

The four driveways run between Constitution and Indpendence avenues and stretch from the Capitol to the Washington Monument. In creating them—as part of the plan to develop the city along lines originally intended by L'Enfant—Maine, Missouri, and Ohio avenues were "discontinued and eliminated." The State of Oklahoma never has had a "suitably designated avenue perpetuating its honor in the National Capital," acording to the resolution now before Congress.

As the commission would name the driveways, Madison avenue would come next to Constitution avenue, because Madison was the Father of the Constitution. Jefferson avenue would be over on the other edge next to Independence, because he authored the Declaration of Independence. Washington and Adams avenues would come in between.

"We must reiterate our stand against renaming these drives," the commission declared yesterday at its monthly meeting.

Victims Identify 2 as Holdup Men

Two men were held by police last night after being identified by victims of recent holdups as the "farmer bandits," who have staged several robberies here.

The men, Orville J. Dailey, 36, 924 E street northwest and George P. Clokey, 29, 1215 Kennedy street northwest, were arrested on Wisconsin avenue by Policeman G. L. Norris, who became suspicious when he saw them run toward a car and drive speedily away.

Chasing the men on his motorcycle, Norris pulled alongside the car and started to question them when one attempted to draw a revolver. Forcing the man to hand over the gun, Norris placed the two under arrest.

In the police lineup the men were identified by employes of the City Service Garage, 5340 Wisconsin avenue northwest and the Riverside Liquor Store at 2100 New York avenue northwest, as the men who had robbed them earlier in the week.

"KING OF GAMBLERS." Paramount picturization of a story by Tiffany Thayer, adapted to the screen by Doris Anderson, featuring Claire Trevor, Lloyd Nolan, Akim Tamiroff, Larry Crabbe, Helen Burgess, Porter Hall, Harvey Stevens, Purnell Pratt, Colin Tapley, Cecil Cunningham, Robert Glackler, Nick Lucas, Fay Holden and Evelyn Brent. Directed by Robert Florey. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Metropolitan Theater by Mary Mrris.

The cold chills and icy thrills of "King of Gamblers" make the Metropolitan air-conditioning quite superfluous. If you are one for hard-boiled homicides mixed in with your entertainment, this show will give you a good time and a half.

A bit of a lacing is taken by the slot machine racket, in that its slippery and unclean background is sharply spotlighted, but then, the Duce of the slot machine run-around is shown declining to raise his take from a mere 70 per cent, and the only actual play reveals a pretty gal raking in a fat jackpot. These last angles seem a bit optimistic to anyone who has fed small silver to one of these devices.

To Akim Tamiroff falls the chore of creating one of the most equivocal characters ever brought to the screen, a top-flight executive whose business happens to be gambling, with the makings of a perfect husband. It just happens that when individuals threaten his business, the most efficient way to remove this hazard is simply to shoot them, push them down elevator shafts or have them beaten to death and tossed in the river. Akim butters up the part beautifully, so much so that you are almost sorry when in an excess of haste, he walks into his private elevator—only the elevator isn't there.

Love on Rebound.

Contending with, and often topping, Tamiroff for acting honors, is one of the few real actors that have simmered to the top of current Hollywood boiling—Lloyd Nolan. You will remember him as the racket chief in "Interne's Can't Take Money." Here he has an utterly different part, that of a reporter who has gone a little screwball and alcoholic, because his best girl has run out on him, but who finds happiness on the rebound, by swiping Akim's 18-karat siren, who also has a heart of gold, played very nimbly and adeptly by Claire Trevor. Returning to Mr. Nolan, may we say that he turns in a practically perfect performance and one that reveals him as an actor not to be typed? He is not especially good-looking, he has no widow's peak, no so-boyish smile, but we venture to say that his name will be in lights, after a while, and will stay there for a long time. In sincerity, force and skill his work can only be compared to that other recent "comer," who has arrived, Humphrey Bogart.

Handsome Larry Crabbe plays handsomely as a night club manager. With his looks, he's naturally easy on the eyes, but so is a bathing beauty.

The Priscilla hand of the Hays office appears divertingly in the handling of the more delicate situations of the picture. Thus when Akim sets up Claire in a de luxey-luxe apartment, it is made clear that he wants nothing but to make her happy and to influence her to enter with him into holy wedlock.

Dialogue Is Breezy.

Dialogue of the show is smarter and funnier than either the story or direction, though the latter has the merit of swift pacing. A trailer of the gambling king remarks that he is after someone who "will either land in jail or 'Who's Who.'" And Lloyd Nolan, when he finds his love living in an apartment donated by Tamiroff, stops her attempted explanation by saying, "Don't tell me anything. But when I get through with this job, I'm coming back here and give you the beating of your life, and then marry you quick."

A fat program of good shorts, added to the crackling feature, makes up a big-value entertainment ensemble. Edgar Kennedy, assisted by that quaint and exasperating old gentleman, whom he has recently discovered, offers a short that will leave you helpless with mirth. There is a cartoon about a jolly little pig's troubles with an alarm clock. Also, a musical short featuring Eliseo Genet and his Cuban orchestra. This is all in Spanish and boasts a flock of excellent novelty entertainers and amounts to about the best orchestra short you'll ever see. The newsreel goes in for sport heavily.

Palace

Redolent of the country's metropolitan race tracks, the breeding farms of lovers of thoroughbreds, the smart gathering places of those who "follow the horses" for the fun of the thing and the barnyard hangouts of the hostlers and more lowly "behind the scenes" hangers-on of the sport of kings, "Saratoga" offers an especially well-judged vehicle for the breezy talents of Jean Harlow and Clark Gable.

Although this was referred to during its making as "Gable's picture," Miss Harlow has leaped into almost complete possession of it by reason of the fact that it is the last production in which she ever will be seen. As the daughter and granddaughter of horse lovers, who is briefly swayed from her first allegiance by her supposed love for a rich young man she has met abroad, she offers one of her typically crisp and semihumorous performances. Gable, too, is cast in a role that is wholly suited to his capabilities as the king of the bookmakers, who recognizes in Miss Harlow's rich young man a "sucker" from whom he thinks he can extract large sums of money in wagers. That is the way it works out—but not until after the spirited young bride-to-be has put up a fight. Yes, "bride-to-be," but not of the rich young man.

The action is punctuated with a wealth of comedy, supplied by such old reliables as Lionel Barrymore, as the irascible grandfather; Frank Morgan, Una Merkel, Cliff "Ukulele Ike" Edwards and Hattie McDaniels, one of the better of the ebony actresses. There are also a number of thrilling races run as an integral part of the plot development, the last of the lot requiring use of the camera to decide a "photographic finish." This is only one of the novelties introduced in "Saratoga."

Melodramatic Romance Has Baxter and Beery in Costellar Roles.

"SLAVE SHIP." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by William Faulkner, based on the novel by George S. King, adapted to the screen by Sam Hellman, Lamar Trotti and Gladys Lehman, costarring Warner Baxter and Wallace Beery, with Elizabeth Allan, Mickey Rooney, George Sanders, Jane Darwell, Joseph Schildkraut, Arthur Hohl, Minna Gombell, Francis Ford, Holmes Herbert, Douglas Scott, Jane Jones, T. DeWitt Jennings and Dorothy Christy. Directed by Tay Garnett. Previewed Wednesday, July 28. At Loew's Capitol.

Virtue triumphs in the end, of course, but before that happy consummation is reached in "Slave Ship" one has witnessed scenes of savage brutality as the black contraband are flogged into the hold of the illicit trader on the African coast; murderous gun battles on deck when the crew of thugs mutinies against the command of Capt. Jim Lovett and the hideous spectacle of files of black captives being lashed to an anchor and drowned in cold blood to erase evidence of guilt on the part of the crew for having participated in an outlawed traffic.

BELL.

There are gentler scenes of tranquil Virginia life and the romance of a man and a maid, to be sure, but the evident intention of the picture was to leave in memory an irradicable impression of the helplessness of the bartered Africans and the hideousness of the trade that made them mere chattels in the hands of ruthless men.

"Slave Ship" was adapted to the screen from the novel by George S. King and lays no claim to historical importance beyond pointing the cruelty that marked the running of slaves from their native jungles to a ready market in the United States. There are no international involvements, no introduction of governmental authorities and no attempt to cut a cross-section from a troubled national era. The story is melodramatic fiction of the most vivid and frankest type.

A Hoodooed "Blood Ship."

The action is initiated with the launching of the craft from which the play derives its name. It was a "blood ship" from the day it took the water, because a man was killed under its hull as it slid down the ways—a barque destined to bear this hoodo as long as it remained afloat, despite many changes of name and ownership. It makes one successful trip back from Africa and while on the customary shore leave between cruises, Capt. Jim Lovett meets and falls in love with a gently bred young Virginian, whom he marries.

Awakened to the evils of his "business," Capt. Jim orders his first officer to discharge the crew and ship a new and cleaner breed of men. It is his intention to take his bride to Jamaica, adopt the life of a planter and live in peace and quiet the rest of his days. But Jack Thompson, first mate, entertains no such notions, hides the original crew aboard and sets his course for the African coast.

It is his thought to have Lovett conveniently murdered in Africa and take over the trade himself on a share-for-share basis with his men. But Capt. Lovett refuses to be murdered and succeeds in getting back aboard.

The return trip is a continuous orgy of killing as Capt. Lovett heads for the penal colony at St. Helena to turn his boat and his mutinous crew over to the British admiralty. It is in this portion of the film that human brutality reaches its zenith, with the burning of the ship as its climax and the Jamaican plantation as its denouement.

With such a cast as has been assembled for the principal roles in this crimson story, it is, necessarily, acted with a desperate realism and as much conviction as such an extravagant tale is able to carry. Warner Baxter is the Capt. Lovett and Wallace Beery the rebellious first mate—an oily, quietly treacherous double-crossing scoundrel who would kill his best friend but freed his pet canary bird when the boat caught fire. Both of these roles are played up to the hilt and beyond.

Elizabeth Allan is the girl in the case, whose honeymoon cruise was anything but what she had planned and Mickey Rooney takes stature with any of those as a tough young cabin boy who turns white when it will do the most good. Francis Ford furnishes a much-needed comedy note as the drunken ship's cook and Joseph Schildkraut is a picturesque and omnious African slave merchant. There are dozens of others in the ensemble who lend much to the color and repellant developments of the play.

There are some beautiful marine and landscape shots that mark the high point of the picture's excellent photography and Tay Garnett's direction achieves the maximum of blood-and-thunder effect without ever threatening to create a great human document or a great picture.

A Varied Stage Bill.

Vic Heide, "the one-man band," contributes a novelty touch to the stage program by interrupting Phil Lampkin's overture with a little backstage tuning up and then goes on to score a hit by playing three trumpets at once and otherwise living up to his billing. Ross and Bennett register on the safe side with their cross-fire banter and dancing and Bert Nable and company offer their acrobatic cat act to generous applause.

Jesse Crawford and his orchestra, playing their first stage engagement, and Guy Robertson, late star of "The Great Waltz," are the bill's co-headliners. Mr. Robertson sang a group of effective songs, as he always does, and Mr. Crawford provided something new in instrumentation, if not rhythm. Featuring two organs, a double-belled euphonium quartet and a harmonica soloist, as well as organ solos by both Mrs. Crawford and himself, Mr. Crawford met with fine success yesterday afternoon.

The Fox Movietone News is the only auxiliary of a feature that will please those who enjoy having their blood run cold.

Meets a Crusading City Editor

"EXCLUSIVE." Paramount picturization of John C. Moffitt's novel of "Roaring Girl," adapted to the screen by Mr. Moffitt, Sidney Salkow and Rian James, featuring Fred MacMurray, Charlie Ruggles and Frances Farmer, with Lloyd Nolan, Fay Holden, Ralph Morgan, Edward H. Robins, Harlan Briggs, Willard Robertson and Horace MacMahon. Directed by Alexander Hall. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Earle Theatre.

The ages-old conflict between conservative newspaper making and yellow journalism supplies the basic structure of this fast-moving and violent melodrama, set in a thriving city where two opposing factions are in a fight to control civic affairs. One group is headed by Charles Gillette, a city plunderer and racketeer; the other by the substantial businessmen of the town.

When Gillette is acquitted by a fixed jury of a swindle running into the millions, his first act is to buy the city's second newspaper and launch a campaign of terrorism against all those who oppose him. Surrounded by a precious gang of hoodlums, he conducts his affairs along the accepted lines of the gangster who deems himself above the law through power of money. His attempt to hire the staff of the rival paper having failed, he sets about ways and means of bringing them to terms.

Tod Swain, the town's veteran newswriter, and his city editor, Ralph Houston, confide to the Swain women folk that they have just had the pleasure of turning down offers of staggering salaries from the Sentinel. Mrs. Swain is completely nonplused that her husband should have declined $100 per week, and her daughter, Vina, who long has been engaged to Houston, awaiting the day when he can save enough to enable them to get married, is sure her betrothed has gone daft to spurn $300. So she decides to be a newspaperman herself.

Joins the Opposition.

Applying to Gillette for a job, after having tipped off a raid on all his gambling establishments, Vina is immediately put on the staff. Her next smart move is to write a scandal story involving Horace Mitchell, candidate for mayor, that all reputable news men have known for years as a trumped-up charge and consistently have refused to print. From this situation is evolved a melodramatic yarn that runs the gamut of all shady tricks known to thuggery. These encroachments upon the welfare of the community and the ethics of newspaperdom are quickly penetrated by the old heads on the conservative paper and they clean up the town in a blaze of glory, the rattle of gunfire and the surge of riots, in which kindly old Tod Swain is killed by a gangster's bullet.

Despite the contention of the producers and the newspapermen authorship of the story, "Exclusive" is not the ideal reflection of the manner in which metropolitan newspapers are conducted. If one wished to be technical about it, a thousand holes could be shot in the picture's claim to strict authenticity. It would be a little more difficult to establish the fact that it is not interesting and exciting, or that it lacks a certain overdrawn sort of romantic appeal. Even so, I am not sure that any city editor would be as complacent about the death of his best friend as Houston appears to be about Tod's.

Ruggles at His Best.

Although the chief symbol of the Fourth Estate's inebriety, Tod Swain, as played by that inimitable souse, Charlie Ruggles, is the most lovable character in the play. Fred MacMurray is an energetic, but not especially convincing, city editor, and Frances Farmer reveals considerable power at times in the role of Vina, the young woman who learns the error of her ways in a very bitter lesson. As sinister as a Humphrey Bogart, Lloyd Nolan never fails to convey an accurate impression of Gillette's complete villainy. The remainder of the roles are of a comparatively minor character, with the possible exception of Fay Holden's, as Mrs. Swain, a part that is made real in her hands.

The Earle's vaudeville bill this week is largely made up of familiar faces. It is opened by the Liazeed Troupe of Arabian tumblers and acrobats, among the best in their threadbeare line. They are followed by Wally Brown and Annette Ames in a repetition of their amusing chatter, songs and dances, with the elongated Mr. Brown scoring the heaviest hit with his introductory monologue. Steve Evans is third on the roster with his impersonations of Hollywood stars and the square-jawed self-satisfaction of Mussolini. Then come Gine, DeQuincy and Lewis in the dance act that starts out to be a conventional ballroom number and ends as a riotous travesty on this type of artistry and a burlesque of the adagio.

The Paramount News and a Leon Errol short-reel comedy are the complements of the feature that leaves the great American newspaper play still to be written.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, July 30.—Idol Chatter: Harriet Hilliard would much rather talk about the cuteisms of her baby than about her screen career. Cited for the Hollywood Croix de Merite: Richard Arlen, because not once in 14 years stardom has he said, "My public." Adrian, M.-G.-M's famous modiste, also designs and hosts the best parties in town. Never order potato chips when lunching with Carole Lombard—the girl has no sense of property rights. Peas from the same pod: Ruby Keeler and newcomer Doris Weston.

HARRIET HILLIARD.

Everybody loves a fat man— or to quote Jack Oakie, "Look at the beautiful girls we marry." Barton MacLane's tough guy swagger would be more effective if his dentist didn't tell so many tales out of school. Tyrone Power's other big moment—the one before Sonja Henie—was also blonde and blue-eyed.. It may have nothing to do with it, but since Joan Crawford quit using so much lipstick, two Hollywood cosmetic houses have gone out of business. Frances Farmer is the most persistent through-the-teeth whistler in Hollywood.

There will be no more mother-daughter photos of Marlene Dietrich and her child—Maria has grown so tall it is poor publicity. Claude Binyon, a Paramount scenarist, has some home movies of Robert Young and Melvin Douglas that the boys ought to see—for their own good. Candidate for the most poetic name: Merle Oberon—and she thought it up herself. Shirley Temple is a foot-under-the-table-patter when the orchestra is playing. Wonder if Mae West invited the plants "to come up and see her, sometime" when she seeded the vegetable garden on her new ranch!

I never see Marion Davies without recalling an amusing story Sidney Ollcott told me years ago. He had been directing quickies when William Randolph Hearst suddenly engaged him to direct Marion in "Little Old New York." Ollcott was to receive $500 a week—at least four times as much as he had ever made before—and he felt like a Croesus. One day he met Marion and Hearst on the studio lot, and Marion abruptly asked how much salary he was getting. "Five hundred!" he told her, throwing out his chest with pride. She turned indignantly to Hearst. "You know I can't afford to have a cheap director," she snapped. "Please see that Mr. Ollcott's salary is raised to $1,000 a week—and make it retroactive!"

I have always wondered how they film those "in-the-mirror" scenes without getting light hilations and unwanted images of the set and camera. Yesterday, I saw such a scene shot—and I am chagrined. Instead of using a mirror, they used a sheet of clear window glass and the actors worked on the side opposite the camera. Very simple—as simple as that egg gag that made Chris Columbus famous.

All the executives of Twentieth Century-Fox are singing the praises of their newest star—a French import named Germaine Aussey, who will make her American debut sometime this fall in "Lancer Spy." I think Darryl Zanuck, the Mussolini of Twentieth, would give his right eye to prove her a sensation, and here is the reason: Samuel Goldwyn, whose much publicized claim to the title of "Hollywood's smartest showman" irks every other producer (and especially Zanuck) like a case of poison ivy, had first chance at Germaine and turned her down. And that is one reason why Zanuck signed her. They are all good pals—these mighty movie moguls—but they are as jealous as a bevy of primadonnas.

RKO-Keith's

Several things are memorable about "The Road Back," sequel to Remarque's "All Quiet:" The tortured young faces of the boys who went to war; incidents during the din of battle; the courtroom scene where a bewildered soldier is tried for murder, and the senseless censoring of the ending, which destroys both the continuity and thought of the story.

Assuming the main part of its action from the moment the Armistice is signed, the film relates attempts of a group of German soldiers to find a road back to peace, serenity, security. They are young; they have horrible memories; they wish to forget war—to sink themselves into a new sort of living. Internal revolution, love affairs, insane comrades are but a few jarring notes.

Whether they work out their destinies satisfactorily is something undetermined, since the scissored ending substitutes newsreel shots for the logical conclusion of the story.

High lights: John King (Ernst) defending his comrade, Albert, on trial for murder; Richard Cromwell, crossing arms with his former commander during a street battle; the death of Wessling (Noah Beery, jr.). There are many other high lights, so finely done, so sincerely effective that the ending becomes desecration.

Cast with a fine attention to the demands of the individual role, the cast is one to command respect. Andy Devine and Slim Summerville supply an over-dose comedy relief; Barbara Reed is the hateful and lovely young thing for whom Albert murders a war profiteer; Lionel Atwill contributes a detestable bit as the prosecuting attorney who dooms Albert; John Emery, as Van Hagen, commander; is convincingly hard and schooled to discipline. But it is the faces of the young soldiers which are unforgettable. The cameraman must be a pacifist, for those soldiers hated war.

A silly cartoon is served. Less said the better. Pathe News contains views of the young evangelist, aged 7, who wishes when he grows up to be a fireman during the day and a soul saver at night.

Trans-Lux

Fighting fish, two wars (China and Spain), 7-year-old boy in Illinois ordained as a minister, and a dozen sports events crowd for position this week on the new Trans-Lux program, which runs the news gamut of variety and interest.

"Battling Bettas," the piscatorial camera study, is a color subject that takes one undersea to witness a domestic scene, with the "other fish" locking fins with friend husband. Weirdly attractive, photographed with rare skill and filled with strane, exotic colorings, the film is one definitely worth seeing for it is unique and factual.

HARRY HOPKINS—When the Follies played Chicago last year Press Agent John Clark started a publicity stunt—a romance between your son and June Preisser, dancer in that show. He arranged the meeting and tipped off editors that the WPA administrator's son was romancing a Follies dancer. But he never dreamed that this publicity romance would blossom into last week's marriage.

Columbia

Those supreme lunatics of the screen, the Marx Brothers, yesterday transferred their convulsing insanities to the screen of Loew's Columbia in "A Day at the Races."

There are not enough of the psychiatrist's adjectives left at this time to do full justice to the crazy goings-on of the Marxian hosts in this ridiculous story of a Florida horse doctor who is impressed into service as chief physician of a Northern sanitarium that is about to go on the rocks for the want of financial backing. The girl who ostensibly owns the curative establishment is in love with a handsome youth who owns a stable of one race horse. How they salvage the health resort is something to roll in the aisles about—as all audiences do.

The handsome youth referred to is played and sung by Allan Jones, who is the central figure in some spectacular scenes of particular beauty—notably the Water Carnival scene. He also sings gloriously in other intervals of the picture. Maureen O'Sullivan is the girl and Douglas Dumbrille the obnoxious person who has a fine scheme to take over her sanitarium—except that it doesn't work.

It is a long cast that appears in this subject and each does his allotted task in the hilarious spirit of the farce. Even the dignified Sig Rumann, not so long ago seen in support of both Ethel Barrymore and Katharine Cornell, goes slapstick for this occasion!

The customary short subjects, including the picturized "Events of the Day," augment a feature that no laugh-lover can afford to miss.

Vanderbilt Yacht Faces Speedy Foe

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Newport, R. I., July 30.—The million-dollar yacht-racing duel for a curious old $500 ewer, world-famed as the America's Cup, will be renewed off this ancient port tomorrow, wind and weather permitting, with two of the keenest international rivals in sailing history handling two of the fastest skyscraping "J" class sloops ever constructed.

For this world series of the sailing seas, Harold Stirling (Mike) Vanderbilt, No. 1 man among America's big boat skippers, will put his newly built Ranger against the blue-hulled Endeavour II, owned and sailed by Thomas Octave Murdoch Sopwith, British airplane maker.

The return naval engagement between these two multi-millionaire sportsmen, three years after their first hectic struggle for the "old mug," marks the sixteenth match for the historic trophy since it was captured in British waters by the schooner America, 86 years ago, and subsequently set up as a symbol of world yachting supremacy.

Vanderbilt, seeking his third consecutive triumph at the wheel of an American defender, has been strongly backed to beat Sopwith again. Not even Ranger's first competitive set-back yesterday by Endeavour II, whose formidable challenge was turned back in 1934, has shaken the faith of American seagoing men in Vanderbilt's ability or the prowess of his giant sloop.

Ranger Is Choice.

Ranger still ruled a 2-to-1 choice tonight to win the series, on a best-four-out-of-seven basis, but there was obvious encouragement for the challenger's camp in the fact Ranger's seeming invincibility had been punctured. There was every reason to believe this year's challenger to be faster, better equipped, and more resourcefully handled than her predecessor.

All things considered, yacht experts forecast the likelihood of some of the fastest races in cup history. The record for a windward-leeward course over 30 miles, such as will be sailed tomorrow, is 3 hours 24 minutes 39 seconds, set by Vigilant in the final race against Valkyrie in 1893.

Ranger admittedly is superior to the 1934 defender, Rainbow, but still fresh in memory are the two victories which Endeavour I scored at the outset, thereby producing a cup threat that took all of Vanderbilt's skill and resourcefulness to turn back. Sailing conditions, as well as the "breaks," always are a factor, so that it will take actual competition to give the first definite "line" on the contending boats.

The first race tomorrow is slated for 30 miles over a 15-mile course, to windward and return. The starting point is a buoy, 9 nautical miles southeast of Brenton Reef Lightship, in the open reaches of Block Island Sound. The signal for the start will be sounded at 11:40 a. m. (E. S. T.)

Weather prospects were a bit dubious. Showers and moderate southerly winds were forecast. Rain is unlikely to cause postponement but offshore breezes will need to be much stronger than they've been for the past two days, if the race is to be finished within the time limit of 5½ hours for a windward-leeward course.

Sopwith, making the sixteenth British attempt to untie an irksome knot in the lion's tail with the Endeavour II, acknowledged criticism for failing to place the two Endeavours in stiff competition before the international contest. He said informal brushes had satisfied him the second Endeavour was the faster boat.

Vanderbilt Criticized.

Vanderbilt, criticized by some for subjecting the defender to possible accident by keeping her in competition virtually up to the last moment, kept his own counsel. He has pursued a course of intensive sailing, outwardly calm and untroubled. Most observers have been ready to concede from the start the Ranger is much faster than the Yankee and Rainbow.

As the crowds gathered for the race, on which there has been little wagering on the surface, the experts appraised the personnel of the opposing crews.

Youth may be the mainspring in the dash and drive of Ranger to date. Vanderbilt is 54, but he appears ten years younger. Prof. Zenas Bliss, his navigator and a professor of higher mathematics at Brown University, is considerably younger, and the balance of his afterguard greatly so.

Cubs Beat Giants, 5-3; Stretch League Lead

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 30.—On the strength of their own timely hitting and four enemy errors, the Cubs whipped the New York Giants, 5 to 3, in the series opener today to stretch their National League lead to four full games before a ladies' day crowd of 37,341.

A two-run rally in the third, after each team had scored three times in the second, put the game on ice for the Cubs and assured them of winding up the three-game series with the pace-setting position still in their possession.

After the third inning outburst, both pitchers, Bill Lee, the Cubs' No. 1 elbower, and Harry Gumbert, Chicago "jinx" of a week ago, hurled airtight ball, with only one man reaching third through the last six frames.

Phil Cavarretta's big bat proved the margin of victory for the Cubs. He doubled in the second inning to score two runs, and added a single later in the game to take the hero's role, despite an error he committed afield after the Giants had done their scoring in the second.

Although each pitcher gave up only eight hits, Gumbert, who blanked the Cubs only last Sunday in New York, never had a chance once his mates started to fall apart afield.

Three of the Giants' four fumbles figured in the Cub scoring. In the second, after singles by Ken O'Dea and Bill Jurges and Cavarrettas' double had scored two runs, the third tally came across when Jojo Moore muffed Stan Hack's line drive.

In the winning rally in the third, Herman opened with a Texas League single, was sacrificed along by O'Dea, and scored on Jurges' Texas leaguer. The Giants then proceeded to do tragic tricks with the ball. Blondy Ryan threw into the Giants' dugout in an attempt to trap Jurges, and the latter went all the way to third. Then Gumbert juggled Lee's bunt to prolong the agony, and Augie Galan, next up, drove Jurges in with a grounder to second.

In the first half of the second inning it appeared the Giants were going to drive Lee right out of the ball game. Wally Berger opened with a single, Mel Ott walked, and Sambo Leslie doubled to score Berger. Ott slid home on Harry Danning's grounder, but in doing so he hurt his leg and Jimmy Ripple had to take his place in the outfield. The third Giant run came across on Gumbert's single, after Leslie was cut down trying for the plate.

The cup yachts are SLOOPS. No sloop ever had more than one mast or one mainsail, which is the largest piece of canvas on the yacht, with the exception of the parachute spinnaker, a huge windfilled bag of light canvas, billowing out in front of the yacht when she sails before the wind.

• • • •

To yachtsmen there is no more thrilling sight than two yachts "wing and wing," or going before the wind with the mainsail out on one side of the boat and the spinnaker out on the other. When the yachts are heading into the wind they are spoken of as "going to windward" or "close hauled."

• • • •

The man at the wheel has the greatest responsibility while the yacht is going to windward, for if he points her too high into the wind's eye, sails will flutter and the yacht loses speed, and if he fails to hold her high enough she will sail too far off the course on each zig-zag tack.

• • • •

When the yachts round the buoy for the run home before the wind, a trained crew will jump into action and set the huge spinnaker, to keep 18,000 feet of billowing canvas drawing to the best advantage. Here, too, the helmman finds it no easy task to keep the yacht in hand, but the difficult question to tack or not to tack is no longer an issue as the yachts will sail in a straight line for the finish line.

Ranger is rumored to have one of the most finely tuned crews in cup race history, and many believe that Endeavour I lost the series in 1934 only through the inability of her crew to get the best out of her.

To yachtsmen, the sail at the extreme bow is the jib, be it a small quadrilateral sail for heavy weather, a big quad, a "Greta Garbo" or balloon jib for light airs. The sail between the jib and the mast is always the staysail, and the tall triangle of canvas towering up the mast and stretched along the boom is the mainsail—driving power of the big yachts.

Best 4 out of 7 races decides the America's Cup. First race off at 12:40 p. m. today, weather permitting. Course, 15 miles to windward and 15 miles to leeward. Total, 30 miles. Race called off should yachts fail to finish in 5½ hours, Reliance, 1903 defender, carried a crew of 75 men to handle 16,247 square feet of sail. Endeavour and Ranger both carry crews of less than 35 to handle 7,500 square feet, yet are faster than any predecessors. America, original winner, cost $20,000; Ranger cost $350,000. Englishmen, Scots, Irishmen and Canadians have spent $10,000,000 in 15 tries over a period of 86 years, for a mug worth $95. Both yachts have steel hulls. Endeavour was built at Gosport, England; Ranger at Bath, Maine. Cut Ranger's sails into 1-inch strips and you'd have a piece of canvas almost 60 miles long.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 30.—Big Dutch Brandt, pitching a brilliant two-hit shutout for the Pirates, bested old Guy Bush and the Boston Bees, 1 to 0, today in one of the year's tightest mound duels.

His mates put the usual story-book finish to the game by producing a run for him with two out in the ninth inning to break up the proceedings. Al Todd's double, a walk, Pep Young's infield hit and Red Lucas' pinch fly turned the trick to end the game.

Pete Sarron Will Defend Crown Here

To Meet Winner of Lou Gevinson-Archibald Bout Sept. 27.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Washington's second world featherweight championship bout within a period of little more than a year appeared to be a certainty last night when Promoter Joe Turner announced the receipt of a cablegram from Jimmy Erwin, champion Pete Sarron's manager, agreeing to defend his title here.

Sarron will risk the crown he won at Griffith Stadium from Freddie Miller last summer against the winner of Monday night's Joey Archibald-Lou Gevinson scrap. This, incidentaly, was the only portion of terms stipulated by Turner acceptable to Erwin. The terms he agreed to were his own, and it is Turner, and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who are accepting conditions.

Offered $6,.

Turner offered Sarron a flat guarantee of $6,500 for a title appearance. Erwin countered with a proposal for a $10,000 guarantee, with a privilege of taking 25 per cent of the gross receipts, for a championship go. For a nontitle bout Erwin is willing to take 30 per cent of the gross.

Neither member of the local fistic firm is interested in a non-title fight. It must be for the championship. Acceptance of Erwin's terms will be cabled to South Africa immediately after Monday's bout with the name of Sarron's prospective opponent included. Preparations for the show will begin immediately.

Fitting Opponent.

Either Archibald or Washington's own Lou Gevinson will be a fitting opponent for the fiery little Alexandrian, who, since winning the belt, has done most of his campaigning on the dark continent and in Europe.

Gevinson has lost only one of five professional bouts, that to Johnny Pena, whom he knocked out in the seventh round of a return bout. Archibald, who stole much of Lou's thunder in five appearances here, started with a decision over Buddy Grimes.

Then, in order, he belted out Lawrence Gunn in six rounds; Ray Ingram, eighth ranking featherweight, in seven; Nicky Jerome in eight; and Harry Gentile in six.

Morris Suspended For Nine Months

Stating that "your honesty, integrity and character has not been and is not questioned," the District Boxing Commission ruled yesterday that the license of Robert 'Mugsy" Morris, local boxing referee, is suspended for a period of nine months.

At a meeting of the commission, called for the express purpose of settling the Morris case, which evidently arose after he had cast the decisive vote in favor of George Brescia at the conclusion of the South American heavyweight champion's recent fight with Bob Tow at Griffith Stadium, the members voted to withdraw its letter of July 7 which requested Morris' resignation.

It was pointed out by the commission that "in connection with the original request for your resignation and also in connection with the commission's action today" no slur upon Morris' reputation or character is intended.

The decision, an unpopular one, was followed the next day by the commission's letter requesting his resignation.

Continuing in the letter dated July 30, the commission further stated.

"Neither is the commission's action in any way based upon the decision in the Brescia-Tow contest in which you officiated." Morris was the referee and when the two judges failed to agree on a winner of the ten-round fight, July 6, he cast the odd vote for Brescia.

Oh, Mr. Gehrig!

The Yankees' first baseman, hired by a cereal firm to indorse its product on a Nation-wide radio network from a New York studio last night, discussed baseball at great length.

Then he was asked point blank what his favorite breakfast food was. Unhesitatingly Gehrig replied that the thing he liked best at the breakfast table was to sink his teeth in a large, crispy bowl of "Wheaties."

A foul off the bat of Frankie Pytlak in the second inning yesterday removed Catcher Rick Ferrell from the Washington line-up for a period of two weeks.

Ferrell suffered a split thumb on his throwing hand and was rushed to Georgetown University Hospital for an X-ray examination of the injury. The photographs revealed no fracture.

Two months ago, before joining the Washington club in the deal that brought him from Boston, Ferrell's same thumb was broken in a game at Griffith Stadium and was on the bench for three weeks.

Owner Clark C. Griffith, of the Nats, last night announced that he was recalling Catcher Jake Early, from the Charlotte club, to bolster the Nats' crippled catching staff, which was reduced to Walter Millies by Ferrell's injury.

Young Early, who had a tryout with the Nats in Orlando last spring, has been playing the outfield for Charlotte after failing to impress Chattanooga managers with his catching.

In the event that Charlotte is unable to give up Early's services, Griffith will recall Catcher Alec Sabo, from Trenton.

The need for another catcher was heightened after Ferrell's injury by the discovery that Walter Millies was suffering from a blister on the thumb of his throwing hand. It's origin is a mystery, inasmuch as Millies has warmed the bench for a month.

Mrs. V. Simmons Wins Tombstone Tourney

Mrs. Veine Simmons yesterday broke 105 for the first time in her short career winning the Ladies' Tombstone Tournament at Congressional Country Club with a 102-26 for a total of 76. Mrs. J. F. Dowdall was second with an 84-7 for 77.

Mrs. Gloyd Awalt won the prize for putting with 28 and Mrs. Charles Slawson was runner-up with 29.

Two Indian Moundsmen Are Shelled

Earl Whitehill Is Driven to Cover; Brown Also Fails to Puzzle.

By Shirley Povich.

Holding Jimmy DeShong hitless and raising havoc with his .100 batting average, the two Cleveland left-handers, Earl Whitehill and Lloyd Brown, encountered some difficulty in getting the rest of the Nats out yesterday and bumped into a 13-2 licking.

The 10,000 Ladies Day fans whooped and hollered, stomped and shouted as the Washington athletes staged a hit wave to go along with yesterday's humidity. Eighteen juicy base hits rocketed off the Nats' bats and the only guy who didn't get at least one of those hits was DeShong.

Cecil Travis collected four, as befits a .375 hitter. He warmed up with a pair of singles against Whitehill, then banged Whitehill for a three-bagger, and tapered off against Lloyd Brown with a brutally tagged home run against the beer ad in deep centerfield.

It was a fattening afternoon, too, for the batting averages of Johnny Stone, Joe Kuhel and Walter Millies. That trio collected three hits each and Buddy Myer chimed in with a pair. The Nats were slap-happy.

It was a breeze for James Brooklyn DeShong, who threw one of his best games at the Indians who, if memory serves, slapped the Nats down three straight times the last time the Washingtons were in Cleveland. DeShong threw only six hits at the Indians.

The Cleveland scoring can be dealt with very briefly. Solters and Pytlak singled in the second and they took a 1-0 lead. Hale walked in the seventh and Lary drove him home with a triple to left and that was Cleveland's only other run.

Al Simmons, who authored only one hit yesterday, inserted that blow at a most timely point in the third. He found Lewis and Travis on base following their singles and thumped a triple to deep center to drive 'em home. When Stone also contributed a single, the Nats were ahead, 5-1.

By the end of the fourth, it was 11-1. Eleven Nats tripped to the plate in that inning and six of 'em scored. Lyn Lary trifled with a grunder off Lewis' bat for a grievous error and Cecil Travis, finding the bases full, cleaned 'em with a triple down the left field line.

It also rid the premises of Whitehill who trudged to an early shower and Lloyd Brown came in to pitch. He got Simmons out, but there was some delay before he could get that third out of the inning. The delay was occasioned by Brown's wildness (he walked the next two hitters to force one run across) and Millies' third straight single that drove in the inning's fifth and sixth runs.

For no reason at all the Nats scored two runs in the eighth. The first run was not a bit complicated. Travis simply whacked his home run to center field and there it was. Johnny Stone singled to right, Joe Kuhel bashed a hit over Hughes' upstretched glove and Buddy Myer singled into Hughes' glove to score Stone.

It was all very inspiring.

Census Bureau Net Team Bows to FCA

Five straight-set victories gave the Farm Credit Administration netmen a shut-out victory over the Census Bureau team yesterday on the Monument courts, 5—0. Only one match was closely contested, and that ended in a 6—3, 6—3 victory for the F. C. A. team of Neslen and Bradbury over Hayward and Gamble.

Results.

Sweeney and Allen (F. C. A.) defeated Tyler and Cole, 6—1, 6—2; McConnell and Lewis (F. C. A.) defeated Kube and Hansen, 6—0, 6—0; Leverine and Brownell (F. C. A.) defeated Dunn and Heine, 6—2, 6—1; Bradbury and Neslen (F. C. A.) defeated Hayward and Gamble, 6—3, 6—3; Vincent and Repetto (F. C. A.) defeated Lawton and Rightor, 6—2, 6—0.

Scores.

McCaskey and Simmons defeated Heacock and Gibbes, 6—2, 7—5; Phillips and Callan won by default; Nolan and Botts defeated Hess and Padgett, 6—1, 6—2; Coe and Chamberlin defeated Nunes and Dunlap, 6—1, 4—6, 7—5; Ford and Treuthart defeated Bingham and Bixby, 6—2, 6—3.

Takes Bat Lead

CECIL TRAVIS.

The name that leads all the rest this morning in the American League batting averages is that of shy, modest Cecil Travis, Washington shortstop.

With a batting spree that consisted of two singles, a three-bagger and a home run against Cleveland pitching yesterday in five turns at bat, Travis zoomed to the top of the league's batters.

The .367 average that he boasted before the game when he trailed Lou Gehrig's .372 and Joe DiMaggio's .369, Travis transformed into a .375 mark by his slugging yesterday when he passed both of his Yankee rivals.

Gehrig, with two hits in four times at bat, boosted his average to .372, but DiMaggio dropped a point when he was able to collect only one hit in four appearances against the pitching of the Browns.

Seeded Players Win in Tourney

Charlotte, N. C., July 30.—Semi-finals of the Mid-Atlantic Tennis Tournament today found the four top-seeded players, Archie Henderson, of Chapel Hill; Teddy Burwell, of Charlotte; George Pryor, of Kenyon College, Ill., and Campbell Gillespie, of the University of Miami, still in the running.

Henderson, seeded No. 1, was paired with Pryor, seeded No. 3, and Burwell, the No. 2 man, had Gillespie, seeded fourth, as his opponent.

Rick Ferrell's Injury Tough—on Indians.

By Shirley Povich.

The correspondents with the Cleveland ball club moaned almost in unison yesterday when a foul tip split the thumb of Catcher Rick Ferrell's throwing hand and removed him from the game in the second inning. But it was not a gesture of sympathy for Ferrell.

POVICH.

And why not? "Well," explained one of the ink-stained wretches, "That just about beats the Cleveland team today. Washington will put that Walter Millies in there to catch and he always bats .500 against the Indians. He's poison to us. Ferrell getting hurt was the best thing that could have happened to Washington."

But by the end of the fifth inning, the Cleveland guys were only half right. Millies wasn't batting .500. He was batting a cool 1.000 with those three hits in his first three trips up there to the plate.

* * * *

* * * *

His name isn't Joe Anderson, or Jack Anderson, as the papers had it, Griffith explained. His name is Arnold Anderson and he has never been knocked out of the box in 17 starts for Sioux Falls this season.

* * * *

Was there anything else, Mr. Griffith?

* * * *

Griffith never has been bothered much about learning the front names of his newly bought rookies, it seems. He doesn't bother much about that, apparently. "Just go ahead and guess at it," he tells the correspondents. "It ain't important, anyway."

* * * *

And that is why Sam Rice played 18 years in the big leagues under the name of Sam Rice when his correct moniker was Edgar Charles Rice. When Griffith took him from the Norfolk club in payment of a bad debt for $700 back in 1918, he couldn't supply Rice's first name.

* * * *

And for years, old Tom Zachary operated as a big league pitcher under the name of Jezebel Tecumseh Zachary, which was some reporter's joke back in 1919 when Griffith, then as now, couldn't provide the front names of his rookies for the press.

* * * *

* * * *

The announcement that Cleveland would pitch Feller in Washington tomorrow drew the latest blast. For weeks, the correspondents have accused General Manager Cy Slapnicka, of the Cleveland team, of making a Sunday pitcher out of the rookie sensation, and this latest evidence was almost too much.

* * * *

It's circus stuff—this business of saving Feller for Saturday and Sunday games," said Gordon Cobbledick, a plain talker, who writes for the Plain Dealer. "It throws the rest of Steve O'Neill's pitching staff out of whack, makes 'em skip their regular turn and does nothing but put young Feller on the spot before big crowds.

* * * *

"Why, he has never started a game on any other day but Saturday or Sunday. He worked the opening Saturday of the season and then he pitched three Sundays in a row. He worked last Saturday and he'll b working again tomorrow. It's a joke.

* * * *

"Poor Steve O'Neill can't say much about it. He has to take orders from the front office and work the other pitchers the best that he can to make way for Feller's weekend engagements. It's hard on him and tough on all of the pitchers, including Feller. They're trying to get out of the red on Feller and are ruining a ball club."

* * * *

With which logic there is very little complaint, seein' as how the long rests between outings will do young Feller no good. He needs the constant work to cure that tendency toward wildness and it is proverbial that too much rest affects a pitcher's control.

* * * *

Connie Mack never coddled Lefty Grove. If it was his turn to pitch, he pitched. If that fell on a Sunday, it was a nice drawing card. If it didn't, Grove didn't pitch. McCarthy doesn't save Gomez or Ruffing. Dykes doesn't trifle with Stratton. In those towns, the front office keeps the books and lets the managers run the teams.

Wiffy Cox Favored to Win Middle Atlantic Pro Golf Championship

Walper-Amos Take Pro-Amateur Play

Kenwood Ace Quoted 5-2 Favorite to Win Big Tournament; Contestants All Play 27 or 36 Holes in Practice Rounds.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Old Point Comfort, Va., July 30.—In a preliminary pro-amateur to the Middle Atlantic professionals' championship that starts here tomorrow over the Chamberlain Country Club course, blond Errie Ball, the Englishman from Farmington, Va., set the practice pace with a three under par score of 69, as many strokes better than Ralph Beacham, the suburban club mentor, who has been on the scene a week and posted regulation rounds of 35 and 37.

Leo Walper, the Washington driving range mentor, paired with Dick Amos, of the host club, to win the pro-amateur with a best ball score of 67, fashioned from nines of 32 and 35, while Louis Worsham, assistant at Chevy Chase, paired with an old friend, also from the host club, to shoot a 69 best ball and finish in a five-way tie for the second money.

The others that tied for the runner-up shot in the pro-amateur event included Ball and his partner, Budd Steele, Roy Briggs, pro, and Lieut. F. M. Reeder, of the Naval Base, Ralph Beach and Capt. March, and Frank Invernezzi, Forest Park, and his simon-pure partner from Old Point, R. G. Pendleton.

Ball, serving his first year in the Virginia professional ranks, formerly hailing from Mobile, Ala., found the tricky, trouble-studded 6,206-yard layout to his liking and was not pressed for pro sweepstakes honors. His round is the lowest in the pre-tourney rounds thus far.

Although Wiffy Cox has been rightfully established as the betting favorite by a local bookmaker, who quoted the Kenwood ace at 5-2 to win, even to place and 2 to 5 to show, Mel Shorey and Walper led the District professional today with 73's, a stroke better than George Diffenbaugh with 74.

The contestants all played 27 or 36 holes today, with the exception of the three Baltimore pros who were on the ill-fated City of Baltimore, that was swept by flames last night, including the defending titleholder, Charles Betschler; Alex Taylor and Willie Schreiber.

Johnny Bass, the former Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion from the Clifton Park Course in Baltimore, who was pro here for six months last year, occupied a dark horse role today as he played the lay-out-by-the-sea in 71 strokes in his morning round and after a bad start in the pro-amateur in the afternoon, finished with 14 consecutive pars and a 72, two strokes over regulation figures for the day, and a score that would lead the field at this time tomorrow night.

Errie Ball and Bob Barnett, at 9-2 to win, and 13-5, 7-10 to place and show respectively, are next on the list while Ralph Beach and Johnny Bass are quoted at 5 to 1 shots for the $300 first prize shares of the $1,000 purse, by far the biggest money in the history of this event.

George Diffenbaugh, Leo Walper and Cliff Spencer rank next at 6-1, 2-1 and even across the board with Roland Mackenzie at 7-1, 5-2 and 7-5, and Al Treder, Mel Shorey and Gene Larkin claiming 10 to 1 for the title.

Al Houghton, the former Washington pro who has occupied the pro position here for nearly a year, is the sentimental choice and is lined up at 7-2, 6-5 and 3-5.

Cox and MacKenzie, paired at 10:05 and 2:05, are expected to be the center of the gallery's attention tomorrow, although Beach and Isaacs, immediately following, will have their supporters.

Yanks Win Series Debut OverBrowns

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 30.—For the first time in a week, the Yankees received effective pitching today and they combined it with their customary clouting to trample the St. Louis Browns 8 to 2 in the current series opener.

Young Kemp Wicker, making his second start since he was brought up from the Yanks' International League farm at Newark, stopped the slugging Brownies with seven hits, and blanked them until the sixth as he chalked up his second straight win.

His chief assistants in the victory were Lou Gehrig, who clouted his twentieth homer with a mate aboard in the first inning; Frank Crosetti, who collected four hits for the day, including one double, and big Bill Dickey, who drove in two runs with a pair of singles.

Alice Marble Beats Polish Star To Win Sea Bright Tennis Title

By the Associated Press.

Sea Bright, N. J., July 30.—Miss Alice Marble, of San Francisco, won a second leg on the Sea Bright bowl today by defeating Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, Polish champion, in the women's finals of the fiftieth annual invitation tennis tournament of the Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club. The scores were 6—3, 5—7, 8—6.

It was the first triumph for Miss Marble, United States national champion, over the stocky Polish star in four meetings.

The blonde Californian, who in 1936 turned back Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, to have her name engraved on the silver trophy for the first time, threw away ten match points today before she finally achieved victory over Miss Jedrzejowska.

In the second set the Coast star posted a 5—2 lead, but in the eighth game errors began to crop up in her play.

In the mixed doubles, Bobby Riggs, of Los Angeles, who is scheduled to meet Wilmer L. Allison, of Austin, Tex., in tomorrow's singles finals, paired with Mme. Sylvia Henroth, of France, to defeat Gil Hunt, of Washington, D. C., and Hope Knowles, of Philadelphia, 6—3, 6—4.

Miss Jedrzejowska and Jiro Yamagishi, the Japanese star, gained the other mixed doubles bracket in the finals by toppling John McDiarmid.

Swim Meet Easily Won By Rosedale

The strong Rosedale Playground Boys' swimming team outclassed competitors yesterday to easily win the team title in the Public Recreation Swimming Championships held at McKinley Pool. Rosedale totaled 73 1-3 points which far outdistanced the 40 points credited to the second-place McMillan natators. Takoma was third with 33 1-3.

Fourth position was captured by Georgetown with 32. Other scores follow: Maury, 10; Thompson, 8; Eastern Stadium, 5; Western Stadium, 5; Anacostia, 5; Burroughs, 5; Potomac Avenue, 5; Weightman, 5; Jefferson, 3; Judiciary Square, 3; Cooke, 2; Montrose, 1; Gallinger, 1; Garfield, 1 and Pallisades, 1.

The most surprising upset of the meet was registered yesterday when Ernie Boggs, Shoreham star, was edged out by young Neil Swann of McMillan in the 100-yard free style, unrestricted unlimited class. Swann's driving finish in the last ten yards clinched a close decision.

In the city finals for the colored centers staged at Bannaker Recreation Center, Francis Playground was ahead with 68 points, Banneker second with 49, Terrell third with 29 and Howard fourth with 21. Others placed as follows: Dunbar, 16; Deanwood, 8; Logan, 6; Rose Park, 6; Morgan, 6; Geddings, 4; Smothers, 3 and Monroe, 1.

Cooper's 68 Low in Rich Links Play

By the United Press.

St. Paul, Minn., July 30.—Lighthorse Harry Cooper, Chicago's British-born golfing wizard, swept into a one-stroke lead in his favorite tournament today at the end of the first round in the $5,000 St. Paul open.

Cooper, who has scored three victories in St. Paul's rich, 72-hole medal play tournament, blazed over Keller course with a 33-35—68, four under par. He finished one stroke ahead of Pat Sawyer, young Minneapolis professional, and two ahead of the veteran Chicago amateur, Johnny Dawson.

Ten others, including United States Open Champion Ralph Guldahl, were clustered in fourth place with 71's.

Cooper's putter saved him all the way around today. He matched a birdie on the first hole, parred the second and took an eagle three on the 532 yard third hole.

On the second nine, Cooper pulled out five pars with remarkable work on the greens and birdied two other par five holes with a single putt on each green. He ran down putts from 30, 15 and 12 feet.

Corn Rallies After Crash To New Lows

Even With 2-Cent Recovery, Prices Are 1 to 2¾ Cents Under Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 30.—Around 8 cents a bushel smash of corn values in 48 hours culminated late today with a 2-cent rally from season new low-price records. Increasingly bright prospects for a 3,000,000,000 bushels corn crop this season were in general given as the cause for lively selling that accompanied the new break of prices. Predictions were that widespread beneficial rains would be received by the corn belt over the week-end. Brisk profit taking, however, on the part of recent sellers was largely responsible for the late rally of the corn market.

At the close, corn futures were 1 cent to 2¾ cents under yesterday's finish; September, 90⅞ to 91⅛; December, 68¾ to 69; May, 70½. Wheat, ½ to 1¼ cents advanced; September, $1.18⅛ to $1.18¼; December, $1.19½ to $1.19⅝; May, $1.24¾. Oats, ¼ off to ⅛ up; September, 29⅞, and rye unchanged to ¾ lower; September, 81⅛ to 81¾. Provisions results varied from 22 cents setback to 5 cents bulge.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Leading foreign currencies pursued a steady course yesterday, with several showing small gains in terms of the dollar. The French franc held quietly around 3.75⅛ cents, up .00⅛ of a cent. The Holland guilder was quoted at 55.18 cents, up .04 of a cent, and Swiss francs ruled at 22.97 cents, up .01 of a cent. The pound sterling at $4.97⅞, was unchanged. The Hongkong dollar rose .11 of a cent to 30.76 cents.

Transamerica Stockholders Get Bank Stock

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 30.—Stockholders of Transamerica Corporation will receive today their pro rata share of the distribution of 2,297,840 shares of stock of Bank of America N. T. and S. A. recently authorized by the directors and approved by the stockholders. The cash value of the distribution at current quotations for Bank of America stock is $126,000,000.

In a letter addressed to stockholders, which will accompany the stock distributed, John M. Grant, president of Transamerica Corporation, draws attention to the fact that the shares distributed constitute 57 percent of the outstanding stock of Bank of America and that Transamerica Corporation will still own slightly more than 42 per cent of the outstanding stock of the bank following the distribution. Stockholders therefore, will receive directly through their ownership of bank shares the benefit of 57 per cent of the net profits of the bank and will receive indirectly through their ownership of shares of Transamerica Corporation the benefit of 42 per cent of the net profits of the bank. A 25 cent per share cash dividend accompanies the stock distribution.

Present Holdings.

Transamerica's present holdings of Bank of America shares are equal to one share of bank stock for each seven shares of Transamerica corporation stock outstanding. On July 29 Transamerica Corporation changed its authorized 50,000,000 shares without par value of capital stock, both issued and unissued, into 25,000,000 shares of the par value of $2 each, thereby reducing its issued 23,181,568 no par shares to 11,590,784 shares $2 par. This reclassification of shares will not reduce the capital of the corporation nor will it reduce the pro rata interest of the stockholders in the corporation. Stockholders may keep their certificates for the old no par value shares, as they are not obliged to exchange them for certificates for the new $2 par value shares.

The management has not applied to the San Francisco Stock Exchange for listing of its new $2 par value shares. Trading in the stock on the Pacific coast will be cared for through the New York and Los Angeles stock exchanges. In line with the prevailing practice of most large New York banks, Bank of America stock will not be listed. However, an over-the-counter market already has been established.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stock Tone Is Firm, but Trading Is Dull and Changes Narrow; Bonds Steady.

New York, July 30.—Stocks held firmer today in a narrow range in a sales turnover of around 650,000 shares, about the same as yesterday. High grade bonds were firm. September wheat climbed 1⅛ cents to 118⅛ cents a bushel.

Hardening of stock prices was the tendency of nearly all groups. Steel shares were prominent, helped by the good profits report of Bethlehem, and even the rails looked fairly steady. Complete reports for Class I systems show that net earnings were a little higher than a year ago in June, although the rate of advance was much smaller.

All classes of stocks probably were strengthened by the growing opposition in Congress to the obnoxious Black-Connery bill on wage and hour fixing and production regulation by New Deal bureaucrats. All believe that the sooner Congress adjourns and that the fewer new bills of any sort it passes the better it will be for business and naturally for markets.

Bethlehem Steel sold at its best price on the movement. National Steel sold at one time up 4 points. Steel preferred sold ex dividend 3 points and dropped another point. Utilities were able to improve a little. North American found backers. Southern Railway was an important gainer.

Merchandising shares picked up on the good Federal Reserve Bank reports on early July trade. Metals were mixed. Motor stocks were narrow. In the weak miscellaneous class were Bon Ami A, Illinois Central preferred, Norwalk Tire preferred, Reliance and Beatrice Creamery. They dipped 1 to 4 points, and Munsingwear again dropped 4 points. Union Bag, St. Joseph Lead, Crane and Flintkote rose 1 to 4 points.

Credit.

The season is near at hand when the use of credit begins to expand in the movement of crops and preparation for autumn trade, but little sign of it is yet to be seen in the banking statistics. This week's report of the Federal Reserve system shows a small drop in total Federal Reserve bank credit in use and the New York commercial banks showed a moderate decline in business loans. The gold stock rose $29,000,000, which indicates that receipts of metal from Japan and elsewhere are enough to make good some of the decline that has set in after the passing of the French crisis. This country is no longer the sole purchaser of gold, and we are trying to give away a lot of it—to China, Brazil and elsewhere—but enough continues to pile up to bring a good expansion in the public debt, as sterilization goes on, and to keep alive the fears of ultimate inflation in prices.

Our monetary gold stock is now $12,433,000,000, against a currency circulation of $6,424,000,000, which supplies an ample reserve for any foreseeable withdrawals of funds to foreign countries. Foreign deposits at the banks here declined this week but the money apparently was not taken from the country, as a net withdrawal, for deposits of foreign banks at the Federal Reserve banks rose $24,000,000.

The various shifts in money brought down excess reserves at the member banks this week by $60,000,000, the total being completely under the control of the Treasury. Meanwhile the slack in corporation financing, and the swing of the pendulum toward greater confidence in Government bonds, led to a considerable addition of bank investments in those obligations.

Treasury Finance.

The Treasury bills which are to be paid for next week carry the option of payment by book credit, instead of cash, and doubtless they will appeal to banks which have slim margins of excess reserves. As on at least one previous occasion, when the option was offered, the issue may sell at a better rate in consequence. The Treasury not only is displaying a desire for low-yield tenders, but also is recognizing that its recent operations have had a tendency to take reserves out of Wall Street, where they are sitest, rather than from banks in other districts.

Revision.

Either at the offices of the SEC or in the brokerage houses the compilation of figures on odd lot trading is subject to error. On July 19 the preliminary figures showed 5,639 orders to buy, against 5,971 orders to sell, one of the rare occasions when selling orders have been in excess of selling. Actually that did not occur, for the revised figures show buying orders on that date of 6,138, against selling orders of 6,053. The figures for July 21 also have been revised, but the trend of an excess of buying or selling is unchanged.

Bethlehem.

The higher Bethlehem Steel dividend and the good increase in earnings over a year ago, while perhaps not so impressive as the showing of the United States Steel Corporation, was better under the circumstances which involved a strike at one of the Bethlehem plants. The results reported by Steel, Bethlehem (under partial disability), and Republic hard hit by the strikes, gives a hint as to what large profits can be made when operations are running at 90 per cent or so of rated capacity, when selling prices are strong, and when no strikes intervene. Contemplation of the profits to be made in steel while the going is good must not ignore the long, lean years that inevitably precede and follow the poor ones. This is the first year since thousands of steel workers were old enough to work that the steel companies generally have made any real money. Incidentally, if the independents have a lower wage scale than that agreed to by United States Steel (as frequently rumored), their profits ought to rise even faster once the strikes cease entirely.

Recovery Month.

At yesterday's closing price levels the industrial stocks on the average this month had recovered all the ground lost since the early part of April. In rising more than 8 per cent this month the average was 5 per cent higher than prices of a year ago and less than 4 per cent under the closing average of last March. The highest point reached on the recovery was the 26th. Since then prices have dropped a little over 1 per cent. Virtually all groups took part in the advance. Steels were the strongest. Railroad shares rose a little more than 4 per cent, but continued well under the closing prices of May and 3 per cent below the July, 1936, close. Rails reached their best on the 21st. They have given up 6 per cent of their value since then.

Passenger Rates.

If the Eastern railroads are considering an appeal for higher passenger rates they have at least kept away from the general discussion stage. Inquiry in rail circles indicates that the roads opposing the I. C. C. 2-cent fare order early last summer are still opposed, while those which took the attitude that it was worth trying out are ready to try it further. A system that has relatively short hauls stated today that practically all its increase in passenger gross became net. It is now carrying full trains instead of partly empty ones. One thing which even the satisfied railroads contend is that the spread between coach rates and the cost of daytime riding in Pullmans should be reduced or eliminated entirely. The result so far has been a thinning out of Pullman clientele and an unnecessary packing of coaches. Improvement in coach equipment has helped to emphasize this trend.

Boston, Mass., July 30.—Living costs are now 4½ per cent more than a year ago and up 24 per cent from their low point of the depression. House rents have made the biggest jump during the past year, going up 11½ per cent.

Utilities and Oils Are Firm on Curb

New York, July 30 (AP).—The curb market trudged along a narrow path today with a few utilities, oils and industrials participating in fractional gains. Interest lagged and no one group came to the front to establish definite leadership as gains and losses were fairly evenly distributed. Electric Bond & Share rose ¾ to 20¾ while American Gas & Electric gave up ⅛ to 36. Northern States Power "A" ended at 25¼, up ¾ and United Gas gained ⅞ to 11.

Oils were generally uneven. Creole Petroleum sagged ⅛ to 36⅜ while Gulf and Leonard held an even course. Sunray eased a trifle and Pantepec pointed fractionally higher. United Wall Paper, Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. and Pittsburgh Plate Glass declined slightly while New Jersey Zinc and Translux was unchanged.

Air Conditioning Sales Rise Sharply

Detroit, July 30.—The "infant" air-conditioning industry is growing into a $100,000,000 business. According to J. K. Knighton, sales manager of commercial air conditioning for Kelvinator division, Nash-Kelvinator Corporation, 1937 sales will actually pass this mark and double the industry's $50,000,000 total of last year.

This 100 per cent increase in sales, Mr. Knighton says, has followed the development of better and less costly equipment, more exact selection of equipment and a greater realization that air conditioning means better work, better play and better living in general.

Associated Gas Output.

New York, July 30.—For the week ended July 23, Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 89,119,021 units. This is an increase of 8,541,354 units, or 10.6 per cent above the comparable week a year ago.

Col. Shingleton Given CMTC Post

Col. P. D. Shingleton, of Charleston, W. Va., has been appointed civilian aide to the Secretary of War for CMTC activities in West Virginia, the War Department announced yesterday. He succeeds Col. Louis Johnson, who resigned to become Assistant Secretary of War.

For several years Col. Shingleton was superintendent of public safety of West Virginia. While serving in that office, he reorganized the State police and conducted his department with such marked efficiency that the Legislature passed a resolution requesting him to continue in public service. He is now engaged in safety and highway work for a bus company.

The steel hull is virtually all that remains of the Chesapeake Line's City of Baltimore, which burned to water's edge off Bodkin Point in Chesapeake Bay. She carried nearly 100 persons, bound for Norfolk from Baltimore. Two are dead and two missing. Baltimore fire boats are shown pouring water on the hot wreckage.
